Senate Rejects Two Substitutes For Injunctions

Plant-Seizure Plan And Ives Proposal For T-H Repeal Badly Defeated

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday overwhelmingly rejected two middle-of-the-road efforts to find a compromise for Taft-Hartley injunctions in national emergency strikes.

The result was at least an initial setback for the Administration and a first-round victory for Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

Defeated by a 55 to 27 roll call vote was the so-called Douglas-Aiken amendment authorizing the President to seize a struck plant for 90 days while trying to settle a critical strike.

This compromise had the support of Administration leaders, but Senate liberals and conservatives, in a rare voting alignment, joined forces to knock it down.

Another critical strike plan, proposed by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), was bowled over by an even more decisive vote. Designed to make the President submit national emergency strikes to Congress for settlement, the Ives amendment was defeated, 67 to 15.

The two votes brought the Senate closer to real test voting on the Thomas bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act. That will come when the Senate gets around to calling the roll on the controversial injunction alternatives.

Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) said he did not regard defeat of the Douglas-Aiken plant seizure compromise as a "clear-cut test."

He predicted the same amendment will make a stronger showing when the Senate has to choose between seizure of struck plants and the Taft amendment combining Government use of injunctions with seizure in critical strikes.

Senators Douglas (D., Ill.) and Aiken (R., Vt.), who jointly sponsored the plant seizure course, planned their strategy for a "second go-round."

They have offered the same amendment defeated yesterday as a substitute for the Taft amendment.

Intervening before that test will be a vote on a third compromise proposed by Senator Morse (R., Oreg.).

Morse's plan, which could reach a vote today, combines features of the Ives and Douglas-Aiken proposals, both of which he helped draft.

It would require the President to submit critical strikes to Congress. In so doing he could recommend seizure of struck plants, and the Government actually could seize them unless Congress disapproved within 10 days.

Only three Republicans (Aiken, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine and Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire) joined 24 Democrats

Quick Action By Pilot Saves Lives of 43

Memphis, Tenn., June 22 (U.P.).—A quick-witted pilot crash-landed a burning American Airlines plane today, saving the lives of the 43 persons aboard.

Thirty-four persons were injured but only 17 were hurt seriously enough to require more than emergency treatment in hospitals.

Pilot Ed Hatch of Memphis avoided a major disaster by shooting the Convair transport under a high-tension wire to the only clearing available—a farmer's pea patch.

One engine of the plane caught fire as it took off from Memphis Airport, bound for Washington and New York.

[Only passenger listed from the Washington area was Bernard Foucault, personnel analyst with the U. S. Public Health Service, who lives at 4515 Maple ave., Bethesda. Foucault, returning from a trip to Little Rock, Ark., telephoned his wife he was uninjured, she told The Washington Post last night.]

Hatch threaded the smoking plane past a wooded area and nosed it down in the small clearing beside a highway.

The airliner trailed smoke and flames from its faulty engine but firefighters arrived quickly and put the fire out while passengers were being taken off.

Witnesses said the plane ripped loose a few telephone lines but the high-voltage wires stayed up and were dangling a few feet above the wreck.

Acheson Asks Quick Action Backing Pact

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that it was of "the utmost importance" to get the North Atlantic treaty ratified and the military assistance program approved at this session of Congress.

Senate leaders indicated afterward that his plea had some effect. Tom Connally (D., Tex.), committee chairman, and Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader, both expressed "hope"—although no more than "hope"—that both measures would be approved before adjournment.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) went further by saying flatly: "Congress can't adjourn without acting on both. We cannot leave any twilight zone in a subject of this major importance to the world."

Secretary Acheson, just back from the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris, spent two hours in closed session with the committee, reviewing the conference, and the outlook for the future.

According to a formal statement he issued at the end of the meeting, he told the committee that "some worthwhile progress was made at Paris in reaching a modus vivendi for Germany and on the principal points of difference on the Austrian peace treaty."

Nevertheless, his statement went on, the "still widely divergent views on basic issues between the Soviet Union and the Western powers" on German questions showed clearly the need of action on the pact and on military assistance.

"This is necessary," the state-

Salesman Killed, Pencil in Pocket Driven Into Heart

Rockport, Ind., June 22 (AP).—A Cleveland salesman was killed today by a lead pencil he carried in his shirt pocket.

Dudley Kline, 57, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, who traveled this area for a Cleveland dress manufacturer, was found beside his automobile near here, a wooden lead pencil piercing his heart.

Coroner Roscoe Medcalf said he believed Kline was changing a tire and the bumper jack slipped, driving the pencil into his chest. The car had a flat tire, and the jack was lying beside the car.

The coroner said the point of the pencil was unbroken when it was removed from Kline's body.

Carpenters Get 10c Raise From Cafritz

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

AFL carpenters — on the twenty-second day of their strike against the area construction industry — yesterday reached an agreement with Builder Morris Cafritz.

Cafritz agreed to the striking carpenters' terms, a 10-cents-an-hour increase in pay.

The acceptance by Cafritz of the pay raise came as a shock to the leaders of the Master Builders Association and Construction Contractors Council, who had met earlier in the day and vowed to hold out indefinitely against the carpenters' demand.

Cafritz is not a member of the Master Builders Association, but is one of the major independents who participated in the builders' move to oppose the carpenters' request for a pay boost over the 1948 work contract wage of $2.40 an hour.

Presently, Cafritz is putting up a large park-where-you-work office building at I st. between 16th st. and Connecticut ave. nw. From union sources, it was learned that 30 carpenters will report to work this morning, but that within a few weeks as many as 200 carpenters will be at work on the project.

A spokesman for the Master Builders admitted last night that the defection of Cafritz came as a severe blow, but the official insisted that the builders' lines were still firm against granting the pay raise to the carpenters.

Union officials, however, believed that agreement with Cafritz would bring a victory for the strikers in a matter of days.

The carpenters signed up two other employers yesterday: F & W Construction Co., which will be using 75 carpenters at the shopping center it is building on the Defense Highway at Bladensburg, and at apartments being built in Arlington County; and Kirk Lindsey, a concrete contractor.

There were no new developments on the strike of the building laborers, who went out a day after the carpenters. They seek a 15-cent pay raise. They got $1.35 an hour under their old contract.

Man Slides To His Death From Bridge

A 54-year-old former Government Printing Office employe, said to have been depressed because of illness, last night slid off the Calvert Street bridge railing to his death.

He was identified by police as Arnold Johnson, 200 Massachusetts ave. nw.

When found lying on Cathedral ave. about 8 p. m., he had no papers of any kind on him, only $1.26 in cash and a pack of cigarettes.

Police read his name off laundry markings on his shirt collar and handkerchief, and later established positive identification.

According to Detective Sergt. Robert F. Kerby of the police homicide squad, Johnson's wife, Mrs. Ann Johnson, said her husband was suffering from a back ailment which had forced him to quit his Government Printing Office job about six months ago.

Mrs. Johnson told police her husband had left the house about 7 p. m.

Johnson survived the 50-foot plunge for several minutes. Maj. W. F. Dildine, 203 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, the first to reach the body, said "his legs and arms were obviously broken, but he was breathing hard for about five minutes afterward."

Johnson was pronounced dead at 8:15 by Dr. William Combs of Freedmen's Hospital who said he was about 50 years old.

Court Changes Rules to Let Trustees Invest in Stocks

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Trustees and other fiduciaries accountable to the courts here will be authorized shortly to invest in certain preferred and common stocks, it was announced yesterday.

Under the changed District Court rules as to securities, many high-grade stocks which are presently yielding 6 per cent return will meet the requirements. Under the list hitherto in effect, legal investors were able to obtain no more than 2½ per cent income on legal bond investments, an authority said.

After a general term meeting of jurists in which the change was enacted, Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws said:

"This is a far-reaching step that we have taken only after considering the careful study given it by committees of prominent lawyers and bankers here. It will cure, we believe, the prevailing situation where large fortunes left in trust under wills are insufficient to support the beneficiaries."

According to Theodore Cogswell, the Register of Wills, the new list of approved preferred and common stocks will not be available for a month or 45 days.

Standards are set out by the court as to such factors as prior dividend record and financial stability of the issuing corporations for their securities to be placed on the approved list.

The list of "legals" will be issued semiannually in accordance with the specifications.

The amended rule states further that no more than 40 per cent of

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Fisticuffs on the floor of the House between 69-year-old Representative Cox (D., Ga.) and 83-year-old Representative Sabath (D., Ill.), sent debate on the Administration's national housing bill off to a roaring start yesterday.

Shouting "Liar," the fiery gentleman from Georgia struck the first blow, sending glasses spinning from the face of the white-thatched Dean of the House.

But the stocky, if aged, Sabath was not caught off base. With the speed and agility of a man half his age, Sabath returned with a prompt right and left which left Cox holding his jaw.

A member rushed in to separate the two and the imposing mace of the sergeant-at-arms, which traditionally is employed to quell House hubbubs, was not needed.

The brief battle started over the allotment of time to Cox to make a speech opposing the housing measure.

Sabath was in charge of the time and Cox asked for 10 minutes. Sabath said he couldn't spare that much, and Cox came back with "liar" and the fight was on.

The two were separated by Representative Delaney (D., N. Y.), a 200-pound youth of 48.

Later both Cox and Sabath made up and posed affectionately for newsmen, their arms about each other's shoulders.

Said Cox:

"I have a genuine affection for Adolph. He's a fine old man. I really love him."

Sabath said he accepted the apology of the Georgia Representative and added:

"I'm sorry, too. Gene is really a capable gentleman."

Military Pay Bill Passage Is Predicted

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Ranking members of the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday predicted that the 302-million-dollar military pay bill will pass this year despite the congressional economy drive.

They gave this good news to servicemen as members of another Senate group—Military Appropriations—sought ways to cut a billion dollars from defense spending next year.

Heads of the armed forces appeared before the Appropriations subcommittee and presented a top-secret report on the world military picture. Afterward, Senators said they were inclined to cut back the Air Force program to the 48 groups recommended by the Administration but to go slow on any other specific reductions.

"Several of us are disposed to hold to the budget proposals on Air Force expansion and require the services to absorb the pay increase and such other new things as the wind tunnels within the present bill," said Senator Bridges (R., N. H.).

Ranking minority member of both the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, Bridges said he believed the military pay bill will pass this session.

"There doesn't appear to be much if any opposition to it within the (Armed Services) committee," he told The Washington Post. "We'll have opposition on the floor. Several Senators want to tie a

Typewriter Takes Stage In Hiss Case

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, June 22.—A battered typewriter was dramatically brought into the Alger Hiss perjury trial today as the defense sought to prove that neither Hiss nor his wife typed secret State Department documents in 1938 for a Communist spy ring.

Raymond S. Catlett, son of a former maid employed by the Hisses, testified that he and his brother received the typewriter when the Hisses moved from one Georgetown residence to another, either in 1936 or 1937.

The defense contends that this is the same typewriter—an old Woodstock model with pica type—which Hiss said was in his house until late 1938. Hiss erred, his attorneys told reporters, when he gave this date.

Highlights of Day

An FBI expert, however, has previously stated that 64 of the many 1938 documents which Whittaker Chambers says he received from Hiss for transmission to Russian agents, were definitely typed on the same typewriter which the Hisses owned.

He gave that testimony after comparing the Chambers documents with letters sent from the Hiss home in earlier years.

Defense attorneys refused to comment after today's trial session when asked if they will produce their own typewriter experts to challenge the FBI technician's testimony, but left this open as a possible defense move.

The testimony about the typewriter came in a day of unexpected developments, marked by these highlights:

1. Supreme Court Justices Felix Frankfurter and Stanley Reed, in what is believed to be an unprecedented appearance for two justices of the Nation's highest tribunal, appeared as character witnesses for Hiss, once a protege of Frankfurter's.

2. A third character witness for Hiss was Chief Judge Calvert Magruder of the United States Court of Appeals, in Boston.

Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, in a deposition read to the court, joined in testifying that Hiss had a good reputation for character, loyalty and integrity.

3. The Hisses' former maid, Mrs. Claudie (Clytie) Catlett, testified that she saw Chambers only once, in 1935, during her employment by the Hisses from 1935 to 1938. Mrs. Catlett is 47 and now lives in Winchester, Va., where she wos born. She has five children.

In Partial Conflict

While part of her testimony conflicted with earlier statements to the FBI, she insisted that furniture which Chambers described as being in one residence occupied by the Hisses from 1936-37, was actually in their previous home, in 1935-36.

In his charges against Hiss, Chambers alleges he saw Hiss frequently at his various homes as late as Christmas, 1938. Hiss is accused of perjury in denying he saw Chambers after January 1, 1937, or gave him confidential papers in 1938 when Hiss was an assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

The Supreme Court justices' presence in the courtroom was an impressive note in a case which has been marked by spectacular developments.

While their appearance had most attorneys apparently overawed, Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy had one exchange with Justice Frankfurter in an atmosphere of strained politeness which seemed to nettle both of them.

Nightrider Probe Ordered By Congress

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A Congressional investigation of terrorism by hooded nightriders in Alabama was ordered yesterday by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.).

Celler turned the job over to another New York Democrat, Representative Byrne, who heads the House Judiciary Committee's civil rights subcommittee. Cellar is chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

The investigation, Celler said, would "dramatize and highlight the need for better civil rights legislation."

No date has been set for the start of the probe because of difficulty in lining up witnesses, Celler told The Washington Post. First witnesses to be called, he said, would be victims of floggings administered by mobs in the Birmingham, Ala., area. Among these he named Clarke Stallworth, Scripps-Howard reporter who was beaten at Sumiton, Ala., last week while working on the case.

Celler said the Scripps-Howard organization had been asked to get Stallworth as a witness but "don't seem to be able to locate him."

Every precaution would be taken, Celler emphasized, to avoid any move which might jeopardize possible Department of Justice prosecutions in the Alabama cases. He said the committee would consult the Justice Department throughout its investigation and would be guided by its wishes.

Czech Group Defies Edict Of Vatican

Prague, June 22 (AP).—Leaders of the Communist-sponsored Catholic Action Society defied the Vatican's excommunication tonight and accused the church hierarchy in Czechoslovakia of anti-state activity.

The Catholic separatists thus added their voices to that of Premier Antonio Zapotocky who last night accused Archbishop Josef Beran of illegally inciting the people against the government and threatened that the law will take its course.

The government-sponsored Catholic Action has been denounced by Archbishop Beran and the Vatican as a fraudulent and "schismatic" organization because it intends to split the church and make it ripe for subjugation to anti-Christian ideas.

Promoters of the organization have been declared automatically excommunicated by the Vatican.

In a statement tonight, however, leaders of the group contended they were "loyal members of the Roman Catholic Church who also wish to remain loyal to our beloved country."

Saying they spoke for "millions" of Czechoslovakia's nine million Catholics, they called on the hierarchy in Czechoslovakia "not to hinder us and the Catholic people again in our endeavor for agreement and cooperation between church and state."

Such an accord apparently would have to be on the State's terms, however. These terms include Government control of education in church schools on Marxist-Leninist lines.

She Dares Prosecutor To Bring In Dictaphones

Spy Case Defendant Sticks to Story She Did Nothing Wrong And Federal Lawyer

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Judith Coplon yesterday testified she believes H. P. Shapiro, Justice Department attorney, and her nights with him in out-of-town hotels and Washington apartments are part of "this whole frameup" directed against her.

"You branded me a spy and now you are trying to brand me as a harlot!" the 28-year-old defendant screamed to her prosecutor in a passionate outburst from a District Court witness stand.

"I want to explain those headlines which branded me as a harlot! I did not know you were going to stoop to this sort of thing."

Says He Told Her He Loved Her

She dared the prosecution to bring to the courtroom "Shapiro or the FBI agents who surveilled us or the dictaphones in the room."

She said she "sought out" Shapiro and went to his apartment here because she was "half crazy" from the treatment she was getting in her Justice Department office—"sadistic", she has described it—when, unbeknown to her, FBI agents were trailing her.

Shapiro, she said, told her he was in love with her, but she herself was in love with Valentin Gubitchev, the Russian U. N. engineer.

She had told Shapiro about Gubitchev, and in a hotel room in Baltimore the Justice Department criminal division attorney kept arguing with her about him, saying he, Shapiro, wanted to marry her.

But: "I did not want to marry Mr. Shapiro. At that time I thought he was a gentleman and very sweet friend and a confiding sort of friend."

Denies Impropriety

She stuck to her story that she did not engage in sexual intimacy with Shapiro. The prosecution has introduced photostatic copies of the hotel room registrations of "Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Shapiro" about the time she says she was deeply in love with Gubitchev.

This is a frontal assault on the prime defense contention that Miss Coplon was seeing the Russian in a kissless love affair, not to pass the Nation's secrets to Russia, as the Government charges.

She explained further the nights in the Southern Hotel in Baltimore and the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Just Out Shopping

This trip with Shapiro was part of a shopping tour for a man-tailored woman's suit because Washington was "a little limited in clothes."

In Baltimore, she said, Shapiro "never slept in that room, did not stay in that room" where she stayed.

In Philadelphia: "You said I had breakfast in bed. I had breakfast in a room. I was fully clothed. Mr. Shapiro kept on arguing with me. I said I fell asleep. I fell asleep on the bed. I was fully clothed, as I was New Year's Eve. I was fully clothed."

New Year's Eve: The prosecution had asked her if she did not spend it with Shapiro, "in fornication," in an apartment of a friend of his in Washington.

She did not, she said, and she

Lake Success, June 22 (AP).—For almost a month, a Czechoslovak citizen employed by the United Nations Information Center in Prague has evaded questioning by the secret police by refusing to leave the U. N. offices, it was learned here tonight.

At one time, informed quarters reported, the secret police actually entered the U. N. offices in an attempt to get Murdock, but they did not persist when the director, Olaf Rytter of Norway, protested they had no right to enter.

MRS. FRANCES REIGER

Husband and wife, a former WAC, found dead in bed

The bodies of a Boulevard Heights (Md.) couple were found in bed in the front bedroom of their home, 4819 Clark st., shortly after noon yesterday in what police called murder-suicide.

The woman's skull had been fractured 'six or seven times" and a claw hammer, smeared with bloodlike stains, lay on a chair near the bed.

Police believe the husband, Harold James Reiger, 47, a Naval Gun Factory employe, bashed his wife's head in with it and then committed suicide, probably by poison, since no marks were found on his body.

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, declared the woman, Mrs. Frances Reiger, a pretty 36-year-old brunette, had been "undoubtedly murdered."

The physician speculated that the husband had died of poison or a heart attack.

After an autopsy performed last night, Dr. Boyd said Reiger's stomach contents would be sent to the chief medical examiner's office in Baltimore for study. A report should be made in about 10 days, he said.

According to Reiger's mother, Mrs. Gertrude Reiger, who lived

Weather Vagaries Play Hob With Forecasting of Crops

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Freakish weather conditions throughout the country are playing hob with crop forecasts, agriculture observers report.

While one section of the country—the Great Plains winter wheat area, plus much of the South—is showing much above average rainfall, other sections, such as the Midwest, Northeastern and Pacific Coast States are showing varying degrees of drought.

As a result of the rain there has been widespread deterioration of the wheat prospects. Some prophets declare that the drop since June 1 will amount to 300 million bushels, and may bring the final total down to a billion bushels or less. Instead of being the second largest in history, as forecast by the Government Crop Reporting Board in its June report, it may be one of the smaller ones for recent years.

One of the best-known private professional prognosticators, A. W. Erickson of Minneapolis, in his June 18 report, had this to say:

"Texas and New Mexico look now as if they will be reduced 35 per cent. Oklahoma may get by with a 25 per cent reduction, but it must quit raining to do so.

"Harvest is a mess in many places. Machines bogged down and tractors pulling the wheat loads out of the fields."

As a result of the rains, Erickson declared: "This is a rust year, the worst since 1935.

"This is a test bucket year, and test weights are down to as low

Atom Bomb Output Is Declared 'Okay'

By the United Press

Atomic bomb output is "okay" and the American people would feel confident about national security if they knew all the facts, production manager Walter J. Williams of the Atomic Energy Commission, asserted yesterday.

He testified before the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee which is investigating mismanagement charges brought by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) against Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal.

Nothing To Be Ashamed Of

Williams, who was in charge of operations at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., uranium works when the Army's Manhattan engineer district ran the atomic program during the war, said Lilienthal's civilian commission has "nothing to be ashamed of."

"I believe if you were able to tell publicly what has been accomplished by the commission," he said, "the people would feel the program is in good hands and the security of the country, as far as making bombs is concerned, is okay."

Hickenlooper called Williams for questioning about the qualifications of Frank Creedon, former Federal Housing expediter who is now the $36,000-a-year manager of design and construction at the Hanford, Wash., plutonium works operated by the General Electric Co.

Williams said Creedon had done a "very masterful" engineering job on atomic projects at Oak Ridge during the war.

Hickenlooper did not explain why he brought up Creedon's name. He turned instead to questioning of commission officials about alleged interference with free enterprise at Richland, Wash., the Government-built "atomic community" of Hanford workers.

He introduced documents showing that business firms which seek to lease land in the commercial district of the community are required to sign an agreement to "abide by such rules and regulations as General Electric Co., or the commission may from time to time establish"

Firms also are required to list exactly what merchandise they plan to sell, and to charge prices that compare with the competitive levels in nearby areas, he said.

Deny Interference Desire

Commission General Counsel Joseph Volpe, jr., and Hanford Manager Fred C. Schlemmer denied any desire to interfere with private enterprise, but said some regulation is necessary because Richland is "an unique community."

Schlemmer said there are special security considerations that must be taken into account, and that the limited amount of land available for commercial enterprises makes it necessary to screen lease-applicants to make sure all necessary services will be provided.

Hickenlooper observed that the system amounted to "complete censorship" of free enterprise.

Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) broke in to ask Schlemmer:

"Where did you get the idea that you have a God-given right to select those who should be in your lodge?"

Volpe said the commission would like to "divorce itself entirely" from the headache of operating a community, but that was impossible and therefore it was trying to prevent "anything that would be detrimental to the community."

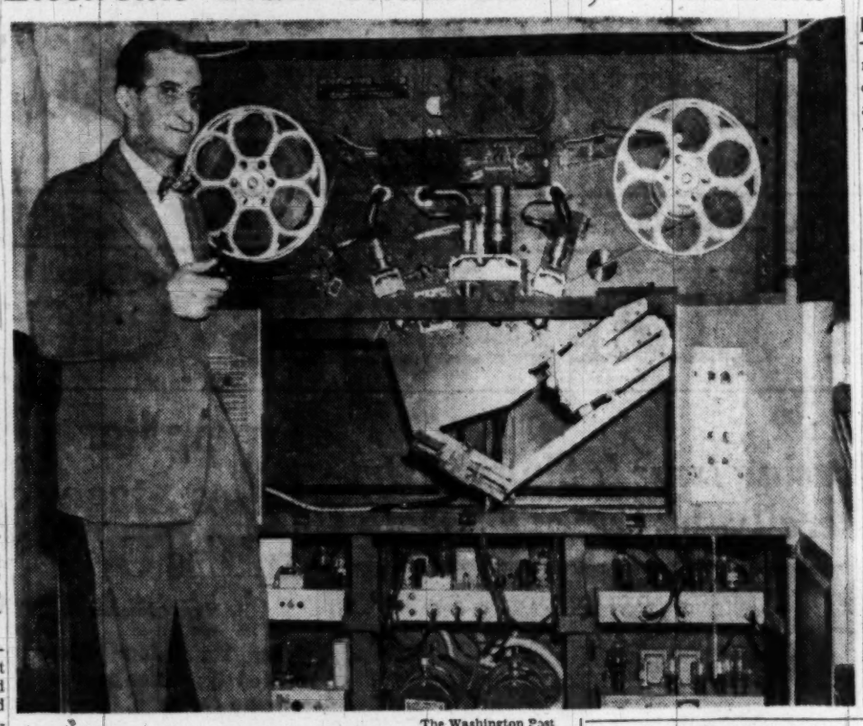
Electronic 'Brain' Reads Books, Selects Data



The Washington Post

THE BRAIN—No Rube Goldberg gadget is this. Ralph R. Shaw, Agriculture Dept. librarian, stands beside "electronic brain"

An "electronic brain" machine which can "remember" thousands of things scientists forgot or never heard about was demonstrated here yesterday.

The piano-sized machine, shown off by the Department of Commerce and Agriculture, can read thousands of books, select the contents wanted, and tell anything it knows at the punch of a code number.

It can also digest millions of personenl records and give out with the exact types needed to fill specialized jobs.

Named the "Rapid Selector," it was developed from principles originated before the war.

The "brain" isn't perfect. Its information must be on coded, microfilmed negatives and such films have not yet been processed, except for a few demonstration ones.

For its immediate future, however, the contraption should prove itself invaluable in jus keeping scientists abreast of present day developments, said Ralph R. Shaw, Agriculture Department librarian, who conducted yesterday's show. Some Federal agencies, he pointed out, receive reports in the hundreds of thousands yearly.

Materials fed into the machine can come from books, cards, data sheets and other sources, when microfilmed to a picture for each page. A code in blocks of white and black squares is placed on each page for each type of information to be "memorized."

More than one code number can be given each page, and the device has enough code patterns to cover 10 million subjects. When properly prepared and geared, the "brain" can give out with the data at the rate of about 1200 pages a day, and can store some 500,000 pages to each 2000-foot reel of film.

Prompt Pact Action Is Urged by Acheson

ment said, "in order that we may continue our firm policy in Europe and maintain the momentum which has been stimulated by that policy. This momentum, in my opinion, was responsible for the lifting of the blockade, the convening of the Council of Foreign Ministers meeting, and the accomplishments at that meeting.

"I have expressed to the committee my conviction that further progress toward our objective over the months ahead will depend on the action we take to maintain this momentum."

Imprint by Acheson

The Secretary was reliably reported to have left these impressions on the committee:

(1) Germany probably will remain divided for a long time;

(2) Austria, on the contrary, can look forward confidently to a treaty this year; and

(3) The Soviet delegation at Paris seemed nervous, dispirited and unsure of itself; the western Europeans, on the other hand, showed greater self-assurance than at any time since the war.

Acheson did not, however, minimize the possibility of further wrangling over details during the summer if it happened to suit Soviet purposes. He showed some exasperation at the tactics of Soviet Foreign Minister Adrei Y. Vishinsky, whom he had never before had to face across a conference table.

Chairman Connally, commenting afterward on Acheson's story, said the Russians obviously wanted to delay a German settlement "in hopes of wearing down our patience and the patience of the German people."

"The Russians," he said, "hope to exert more and more propaganda and influence on the Germans to secure their support. Their objective is to tighten their control of eastern Germany and to spread their influence over the rest of Germany."

Acheson plans to appear this morning before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

U. N. Indorsed by Governors

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 22 (U.P.).—The 41st Annual Governor's Conference adjourned tonight after calling for continued support of the United Nations, continuance of the European Recovery Program and speedy Senate approval of the North Atlantic pact.

Concerning the North Atlantic Mutual defense pact to strengthen western Europe, the conference said that "necessary action should likewise be taken to implement the pact and give to it full force and effect."

By implication, if not by word, the resolution called for furnishing arms to western European nations friendly to this country.

All other resolutions adopted at the final executive session, which saw the selection of Gov. Frank Carlson of Kansas, a Republican, as chairman for the 1950 conference, covered domestic matters. Carlson succeeds Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., Maryland Democrat.

Dutch Troops Quit Capital

Batavia, Java, June 22 (AP).—The Dutch announced today they will begin a military evacuation of Jogjakarta on Friday. The Indonesian Republican government should be able to return to its capital by July 1, the announcement said.

The announcement was made by J. H. Van Royen, chairman of the Netherlands delegation negotiating with the Republicans, at a meetings of the United Nations Commission for Indonesia.

The Dutch and Indonesians thus have reached a meeting of minds on implementation of their agreement of May 7. This agreement provided for reestablishment of the republic in a small area with a radius of about 20 miles around Jogjakarta.

An U. N. announcement said the Dutch had agreed the Republican government would undertake detailed implementation of its agreement to cease guerilla activities after it is restored to its capital. Previously the Dutch had been insisting this being done before the government returned.

Restoration of the government is preliminary to the holding of a round-table conference at The Hague to hammer out an agreement on a United States of Indonesia government for all the islands.

British Coal Industry Emerges From the Red

London, June 22 (AP).—Britain's state-owned coal industry reported tonight a profit of £1,651,965 ($6,607,860) for 1948, its first since the mines were nationalized in 1947.

In 1947, the state-operated industry lost £23,255,586 ($93,022,344). Coal was the first industry put under state-ownership by Britain's Labor government.

Peace Periled In Palestine

Lausanne, Switzerland, June 22 (AP).—The United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine reported formally tonight that its efforts to reach a Palestine peace settlement are threatened with failure.

In its third progress report to U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie the commission said it had been unable to bring the two parties to the dispute into joint session but that it was continuing its labors, now in the eighth week.

The report said the commission was trying to lead the Arab states to negotiate on territorial questions

Offer Made to Ease West Berlin Strike

Berlin Lifeline

Continuous Airlift Year Old Sunday

Frankfurt, Germany, June 22 (AP).—The airlift on Sunday will mark the first anniversary of continuous operation to Berlin.

By June 26, American and British planes will have flown more than one billion air miles in pumping 1,941,000 tons of supplies into Berlin, United States Air Force officials said today.

Throughout the Soviet blockade, from June, 1918, until May of this year, this aerial shuttle was Berlin's sole link to the Western world. With rail service to the west severed by a strike, Berlin again depends on the airlift for life.

8200-Ton Daily Minimum

The big fleet of 380 planes is lofting a minimum of 8200 tons daily over the Russian zone from western Germany.

Of the estimated 1,941,000 tons which will be airlifted by Sunday, more than 500,000 tons will be food, 1,200,000 tons of coal and 180,000 tons of other supplies.

Airlift planes have rumbled into Berlin loaded with snowplows and potatoes, ambulances and margarine.

Costs U. S. $181,307,900

The Air Force estimates the cost to the United States for 10 months of air operations (latest available figures) as $181,307,900.

More than 57,000 persons—military and civilian—work with this mammoth operation.

Fifty-one American and British fliers have been killed in 17 fatal crashes.

On its greatest day—April 16—12,940 tons were ferried in 1398 flights.

Berlin, June 22 (AP).—Berlin's 14,000 anti-Communist railway strikers today agreed to lift the "little blockade" of the city's western sectors without calling off the rest of their walkout.

Union leaders, however, admitted doubt the Russian-controlled railway management would cooperate in the "emergency service" plan.

The strikers said they would restore west Berlin's rail supply lines to normal in accordance with the wishes of the Big Four Foreign Ministers. The Big Four agreed in Paris that the United States, British, French and Russian commanders in the four-power city were obligated to try to end the city's tangled transportation problem.

Called 5 Weeks Ago

The non-Communist union (UGO) called the strike five weeks ago.

A union spokesman said the decision to restore normal freight traffic to west Berlin without ending the strike means:

1. The western sector elevated trains which carry nearly one million passengers daily will remain stalled.

2. Any rail freight consigned to the Russian zone will not move through the western sectors, which the strikers control.

Following urgings from American and British officials the union admitted it was "obligated to establish emergency service immediately."

"We will offer interzonal trains to Potsdam and accept them from there," Heinz Bracht, chairman of the union said. "If they (the railway management) don't cooperate on this basis, it means they are willing to impose the blockade again."

Bracht explained the union planned to operate trains only during the daytime, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. He said the men would work the emergency service without pay.

A union announcement said trains from Western Germany to Berlin should be moving through the yards by Friday toward unloading depots.

U. S. Gives Approval

A spokesman for the U. S. Military Government said: "We certainly approve of moving traffic. The important question, though, is this: Will the Russian-controlled railway system approve it?"

Before taking their latest decision, the strike leaders voted not to accept Soviet assurances there would be no reprisals if the men ended their strike.

These assurances were given yesterday to the three Western commanders in writing by Maj. Gen. Pavel Kvashnin, Russian transport chief.

Commenting on the strike leaders' failure to pay heed to the Soviet assurances, W. T. Babcock, U. S. deputy commandant in Berlin said:

"It's time they start considering what's best for Berlin, not purely for their union."

Yugoslavia Scores Action On Austria

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 22 (AP).—Yugoslavia may be through playing ball with Russia on international affairs.

That is the opinion of diplomatic observers here, following Russia's action in siding with the Western powers against Yugoslavia's war claims on Austria.

The Yugoslav Foreign Office included Russia today in a stiff note of protest against the decision of the Council of Foreign Ministers in Paris. The other protests went to the American, French and British embassies here.

The note said denial of Yugoslav claims to a slice of Carinthia in southern Austria, and her big bill for war damages, was "unjust" and "unacceptable." A review of the decision was demanded.

Attention was called to the fact that the Big Four failed to consult this country although Austria's Foreign Minister Karl Gruber was received for talks.

Foreign Minister Edvard Kardelj used some of the strongest terms in the year-old controversy with Moscow in a speech at Titograd.

He said Russia had organized six other countries into a tightly knit scheme against Yugoslavia, and like the old Czarist Russia, was promoting hate in the Balkans to gain her own "dirty" ends.

RULE FOR FOLO

World Bank Loans Sought By Yugoslavs

Belgrade, June 22.—The Yugoslav Communist regime is seeking loans from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development amounting to about 200 million dollars, it was learned reliably today.

Previously it was believed Yugoslav approaches to the bank during the spring involved much smaller sums—about 50 million dollars.

Yugoslavia is known to have sought loans from two private banks in the United States—the Chase National Bank of New York and the Bank of America.

Airing of U. S. Secret China Policy Forecast

The State Department is planning to publish a documented record of American policy toward China, it was learned last night.

The record will contain much material kept secret or confidential until now, in the belief that its publication would embarrass the Chiang Kai-shek regime.

High officials are convinced now that this material will dampen a good deal of public criticism of the State Department's policy and tactics in China. It will include not only a record of American support for the Chiang Kai-shek government, but also the story of repeated American appeals and warnings that were disregarded.

Confirmation of W. Walton Butterworth as Assistant Secretary in charge of Far Eastern affairs was approved yesterday by the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee. The nominations of four other Assistant Secretaries and two deputy Undersecretaries also were approved.

A floor fight over Butterworth's nomination is expected, since he was director of the Office of Far Eastern Affairs during Gen. George C. Marshall's term as Secretary. Opponents of the Administration's China policy argue that the present victories of the Chinese Communists are attributable, in large part, to decisions made when Marshall was Secretary.

Meanwhile Dr. Kan Chieh-hou, personal representative of acting-President Li Tsung-jen of Nationalist China, appealed personally to President Truman yesterday for further American aid against the Chinese Communists. Kan told reporters he submitted a letter from President Li, together with a detailed plan outlining how the Nationalists expected to defend themselves against Communism, and what they expected from the United States.

Neither Dr. Kan nor Ambassador Wellington Koo, who accompanied him to the White House, would disclose details of the plan. They said, however, that President Truman "listened with interest, and sympathetically."

Plane Attacks Shanghai For Third Straight Day

Shanghai, June 22 (AP).—A Nationalist warplane struck at Shanghai today in the third air attack in as many days, dropping a bomb near a British freighter damaged and grounded in yesterday's raid.

It was believed the plane was aiming at nearby oil installations on the Whangpoo River and not at the freighter Anchises.

(The Foreign Office in London, however, declared the Anchises was strafed. It said there were no casualties. It reported one bomb fell near the ship and a second exploded inland.)

Shipping already is seriously restricted, although the pro-claimed Nationalist blockade of Shanghai and other Communist ports does not begin officially until Sunday.

(A survey in New York showed Shanghai already is out of bounds to most American shipping.)

Britain to Increase Forces at Hongkong

London, June 22 (NYHT).—The British government is sending more defense forces to Hongkong because of "the uncertain position in China and our responsibility for Hongkong," Defense Minister A. V. Alexander said today.

Alexander's statement to Commons was brief and cautious. He reiterated Britain's desire for the "friendliest possible relations with whatever may be the government of China." Under questioning from Willie Gallacher, Communist, he said the government was still trying to contact the "liberation authorities" but, he added, "not with much success."

British Labor Asks Management Voice

By Czech Leader

World Union Of Non-Red Labor Hit

Geneva, June 22 (AP).—A Czechoslovak labor leader today denounced plans for welding the world's non-Communist trade unions into one organization. He called it an attempt to disrupt working class unity.

Frantisek Vavricka, chairman of the social and political committee of the Czech Trade Union Organization, said the plan "corresponds admirably to the aims and objectives of the adversaries of the workers."

Vavricka spoke at the International Labor Conference against the formation of a free world trade union organization in opposition to the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU).

Delegates of many of the world's free trade unions will meet here over the weekend to discuss founding of the new organization. The move is spearheaded by representatives of the British Trades Union Congress and the CIO and AFL.

London, June 22 (U.P.).—The General Council of the Trades Union Congress decided today to give labor a voice in managing Britain's nationalized industries.

In a special report, the council also recommended more schooling-for-management lectures by sociologists, psychologists and economists to "reeducate" the bosses so they could run the nationalized industries.

The report covered the coal, transport, electricity and gas industries, all managed by Britain's Socialist Government.

The council complained that labor now had little or nothing to say about the way they were run.

Senate Bars Seizure Plan

in voting for the Douglas-Aiken amendment.

Thirty-two Republicans and 23 Democrats voted "No." These last formed a strange voting pattern, ranging all the way from the ultra-New Deal left to the extreme Southern Democratic and GOP right.

Although it was smothered by a more than 4 to 1 vote, Ives' proposal to put critical strikes up to Congress picked up more support on the GOP side. Eight of the 15 votes for it were cast by Republicans. Forty Democrats and 27 Republicans voted "No."

Just before the vote on the Ives plan, Taft rose in defense of the injunction procedure in critical strikes.

He argued that a filibuster in Congress might imperil the Nation under the Ives proposal. Defending his own plan, he said the injunction would be used only in great emergencies, "not in the interest of employers, only in the interest of the public."

Ives said he didn't think Congress would filibuster in a "dire" emergency. He said Taft "disregarded the psychology involved."

"When we try to settle disputes by legal compulsion we are using the worst method," Ives said.

Senator Neely (D., W. Va.), uncompromising champion of straight repeal, delivered a bitter attack on the Taft-Hartley Act and all compromise proposals just before the seizure vote was taken.

He said Senators trying to compromise by accepting portions of the Taft-Hartley Act are selling the Democrats "down the river" and might cost them an election victory in 1952. Neely saw Taft as the possible GOP presidential nominee in that year.

The Senate already has adopted four modified provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act in the middle-of-the-road compromise effort.

These include requirements that both unions and employer must bargain in good faith; that both must file financial statements; that both must sign non-Communist and non-Fascist affidavits, and a guarantee of "free speech" to employers.

Boat Hit Mine

Hilldrings Cool Aboard Sinking Ship

London, June 22 (U.P.).—Survivors of the sinking of the Belgian steamer Princess Astrid said today American Maj. Gen. John H. Hilldring and his wife were the coolest passengers on the vessel when it hit a mine in the English Channel yesterday.

Hildring

Miss Betty Jenkins, one of the passengers, said the general refused to leave the ship in the early lifeboats, insisting that the other passengers go ahead.

"He was one of the last to leave the ship, and I saw him take a complete film of the scene with his movie camera," Miss Jenkins said.

The 54-year-old general was director of the War Department Civil Affairs Division during the war, and was appointed Assistant Secretary of State in 1946. The Hilldrings live in Washington, D. C.

The general said he and Mrs. Hilldring were in the dining salon when the ship hit the mine.

"We had just left our deck chairs amidships," Hilldring said. "Chances are we would had been badly hurt if we'd remained up there."

The Princess Astrid sank about two hours after the explosion.

'5 Percenters' Probe Opened

NYHT News Service

The Senate Investigating Committee opened a probe of Washington's "five percenters" yesterday as James V. Hunt appeared voluntarily and told his story to members of the committee staff at a closed-door session.

Hunt is the former lieutenant colonel in the Army Quartermaster Corps whose assurances to a small businessman that he could obtain Government contracts through "influence" were disclosed by the New York Herald Tribune Tuesday.

Hunt, in answer to a verbal request from the committee, appeared at its offices in the Senate Office Building accompanied by his attorney, Edward A. Hayes, former national commander of the American Legion.

Hunt and his lawyer held a lengthy conference with William P. Rogers, chief counsel for the committee who has been directed by Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.), the committee chairman, to conduct a full investigation of Hunt's activities as a "5 percenter."

Neither Hunt nor Rogers would discuss their meeting later.

Rogers also questioned officials of the War Assets Administration—presumably about the "deal" involving the Lido Beach Club, Long Beach, L. I., on which Hunt claims to have made $102,500 in commissions.

Police Gazette Banned

savings account record

It's at the top of Miss Burke's list of "best sellers"—not a work of fiction, but a beautiful fact that gets better looking every pay day.

Miss Burke, like hundreds of other Government girls, has discovered that the relatively small amount she's able to put aside from every pay check has an exhilarating way of "growing up!" Columbia Federal's liberal dividend policy ($237,934.10 paid in 1948 alone) helps a lot. And there's never any question about assured safety—for, in addition to Columbia Federal's careful policies, every account is Federally insured up to $5,000 by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp.

You're invited to open a savings account at convenient Columbia Federal. It can be as small—or as large—as you wish to make it. We'll be pleased to tell you about the various plans available.

Military Pay Bill Passage Is Predicted

Government civilian pay boost to the military bill—which would kill it. But I don't think they'll succeed.

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee told The Post he considers the chances for passage of military pay legislation this year to be "good."

"I am for the bill," he said. "It's a sound measure and we've needed a major revision of service pay scales for a long time. I don't think the economy pressure will block it. After all, 400 million dollars was in the budget for pay increases—400 million out of 40,000 billion—and Congress already has cut 100 million from the pay bill."

Tydings said his committee will meet in executive session this morning on the legislation and added that the first thing they must decide is whether or not to include retirement reform in the bill.

He declared he had not made up his own mind on this subject. Inclusion of retirement legislation will complicate the bill, but not necessarily block its prospects of passage this year, the Marylander stated.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson headed the group of Pentagon chiefs who testified behind the locked doors of the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday. With him were the Joint Chiefs of Staff—Gen. Omar Bradley, Admiral Louis Denfeld, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg—Army Secretary Gordon Gray, Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews and Acting Air Force Secretary Eugene Zuckert.

Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former Ambassador ot Moscow, also was heard. It is understood the Senators were given a briefing on the war potential of the East vs. West and war-peace prospects.

After the session, Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) did not repeat his forecast that one billion dollars could be cut from the 1950 military spending bill.

"We hope to cut, but must be guided by Secretary Johnson and his advisers to a considerable degree," said Thomas.

He admitted that the group is considering among other things cutting out the 800 millions voted for Air Force expansion in the House and absorption of the pay increase within the existing bill. President Truman included 400 million dollars for the pay boost in his budget, but no funds are carried for it in the regular 1950 appropriations bill. One method of absorbing the increase without additional money would be to permit Pentagon officials more discretion in spendinf, particularly in transferring funds from one use to another.

Elimination of the 800 millions added by the House for a larger Air Force than recommended by Administration chiefs probably would result in a floor fight to save the funds. However, Secretary Johnson and the Joint Chiefs are backing the 48 group Air Force budget.

Backtracking a bit on his forecasts that heavy slashes could be made in next year's military budget, Senator Thomas declared:

"We've got to get the Tydings unification bill through the House before any substantial savings in defense spending is possible."

House hearings on the measure will start late this month.

Third Rebel Planeload Slain, Dominicans Say

Havana, Cuba, June 22 (AP).—A Dominican broadcast tonight said a third planeload of revolutionary invaders had been wiped out by capture or death.

The bradcast said some of the rebels who had sought refuge in the mountains on the north coast had been killed, and the rest surrendered. The number of prisoners was given as between five and seven.

President Rafael Trujillo had declared the revolution crushed Monday with the wiping out of two planeloads of invaders who landed Sunday night.

Sabath and Cox Trade Blows

42 years—since 1907. He is called Dean of the House by virtue of having had the longest continuous service.

Cox has been in the House 24 years. Sabath appears to shade him some in weight, but Cox, taller and more slender, had an initial advantage in reach.

Eventually Cox received 7 minutes in which he delivered a blistering attack on the measure which Sabath had already strongly praised.

See "Whirlwind of Destruction"

But there was no mention of the fisticuffs in the Cox speech. Cox said he just wanted to speak to his colleagues "in the spirit in which one brother would counsel with another" on family matters.

Cox said he saw "a whirlwind of destruction approaching" and told the House the bill "plainly, openly and boldly declares socialism to be our new national policy." And to the spirited applause of some GOP members, Cox quoted the recent speech of former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes about the trend toward statism.

Sabath earlier, in indorsing the Administration measure, delivered a blistering attack on the real estate lobby. He said it has spent "a great deal of money and time misinforming the public and members."

Congress, said Sabath, has appropriated billions to help foreign countries, so why should it not supply a tenth as much to help "our own deserving American citizens who are pleading and crying for housing"?

Despite the opening flurry, the housing measure, largest in the Nation's history, got off to a quick start when the chamber, by voice vote, aproved a resolution to make its consideration in order.

Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee announced he would offer an amendment to bring the bill in line with Senate-approved legislation. This was agreed on by House Democrats yesterday who scaled down the Administration request for 1,050,000 public housing units in the next seven years to 810,000 units over the next six years. This puts the House measure in line with the bill adopted by the Senate in April.

House Republicans, however, are lined up in determined opposition to the bill.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., warned that passage of this measure would imperil the Nation" by contributing to economic insecurity.

"This bill," Martin told the House, "could cost between 16 and 19 billions of dollars in the period of its lifetime. That is a heavy obligation to assume in the face of a possible financial collapse. Less than 6 per cent of our people would be in a class available to benefit by the legislation, and less than 7 per cent of those available could be selected.

"In other words, out of every 1000 people you know, only 4 could qualify. The limitation placed in the bill provides for those four. The other 996 persons will get nothing but increased tax bills. So few to be benefited to imperil so many."

Economy Senators Petition Both Sides

Economy bloc leaders on both sides of the Senate aisle yesterday started circulating a petition designed to force action in a resolution directing the President to make cuts in appropriations.

Leaders of the drive said nearly a majority of Senators signed up the first day and predicted close to two-thirds of the Senate would eventually sign.

The petition "requests" both Senate Democratic Leader Lucas and Republican Leader Wherry to arrange the Senate schedule so the resolution can be called up at the earliest possible date.

Lucas Says It "Passes Buck"

The "bipartisan" petition movement, closely patterned after the method used to force approval of the Wherry cloture compromise in the Senate rules dispute, started after sponsors of the measure were blocked in an effort to clear it Tuesday by unanimous consent.

Lucas told the Senate the same day he did not plan to call it up because it "passes the buck" to the President and Congress "should have the courage to do its own cutting."

The so-called McClellan resolution directs the President to make from 5 to 10 per cent cuts in total 1950 appropriations, but not to cut any item more than 20 per cent.

Started By McClellan

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), chairman of the Expenditures Committee which reported out the resolution, started the petition circulating on the Democratic side.

Twenty-one of the 54 Democratic signed before McClellan turned the petition over to Senator Reed (R., Kans.) for circulation on the GOP side. Reed was reported to have gathered 24 Republican signatures before the Senate recessed.

Anti-Lynching Bill Opposed by Sheriffs

Detroit, June 22 (AP).—The National Sheriffs Association adopted a resolution today opposing the antilynching bill pending in the United States Senate.

The sheriffs contended that the bill—sponsored by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.)—is unnecessary because State laws already provide penalties for sheriffs who fail to protect prisoners from mobs. The bill would impose a fine of $5000 or a prison term of five years on a sheriff willfully participating in a lynching.

First Quarter Corporation Profit Margin Reported Below 1948 Levels

Corporation profit margins for the first quarter of 1949 were below 1948 levels, but "still high, relative to earlier prosperous periods."

Reporting this yesterday, the Federal Reserve Bulletin defined profit margins as "the ratios of profits, before taxes, to sales."

Corporate profits in 1948 after taxes were about 10 per cent above 1947 and at the highest level on record, the board publication said.

It found these trends:

1. Almost all the profit increases in 1948 occurred in manufacturing, and then only among "the very largest" companies.

2. Small and medium-sized companies, whose profits had shown the greatest relative increases in the war and earlier postwar years, "were already experiencing sharp drops in profit in 1948."

Profits—after taxes—of manufacturing concerns with assets under five million dollars declined 20 per cent from 1947 to 1948 while those of concerns with assets of 100 million dollars or more rose nearly 50 per cent, said the bulletin.

In the first quarter of 1949, the article said profits of "larger" manufacturing companies were about 15 per cent below fourth quarter 1948 figures and "only about 10 per cent larger" than in last year's first quarter.

Corporate profits have been in cross currents in recent months, the bulletin said, commenting:

"On the one hand, increases in fixed costs per unit of product, which have resulted from a declining level of sales, and the replacement of inventory profits with inventory losses as prices declined, have each tended to reduce profits.

"On the other hand, decreases in unit labor costs and unit material costs have tended to sustain profits."

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said that if businessmen are in trouble, it is partly their own fault. The department reported that businessmen's customers are buying with more confidence than businessmen themselves are.

In other words, a survey said, businessmen have given the economic downturn a big push by cutting back their own buying sharply. While ordinary consumers bought with "continued firmness" through May, the department's June report on current business said:

"The trend of busines purchasing since the first quarter has been directed toward cutting inventories and reducing forward ordering—a move evident all the way from the manufacturing to the retail stage.

"As the second quarter progressed, this general reduction in business commitments was reflected in additional declines in income, production and industrial prices."

'Frameup,' Miss Coplon Screams on Questioning About Shapiro

went to the apartment with Shapiro because she was not used to drinking, had drunk too much champagne, had to vomit, and her room in McLean Gardens had no toilet.

"I went there that (New Year's) evening. I vomited, to be specific. I fell asleep. I slept there. I slept there for hours. I woke up. I came out of the place."

The hectic day, a stormy procession of tirade and temper, saw Judge Albert L. Reeves warn Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer after one of his flareups: "The next fine on you will not be a fine—it will be a jail sentence."

The platform for Miss Coplon's raging declamations was erected when Chief Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., took her back in testimony to the night of February 17—when she spent in Shapiro's apartment here just before going up to see the 32-year-old Gubitchev in New York the next day.

Suddenly she sat forward sharply in her chair: "I want to explain!" cried the trim, 5-foot, 100-pound defendant. "You branded me as a spy and now you are trying to brand me as a harlot! Why don't you tell this jury he (Shapiro) is in the Department of Justice and an attorney under Mr. Whearty?"

Whearty, who once called her "Judy," once got her a raise when he was her chief in the Foreign Agents Registration Section of the Justice Department, is now one of her prosecutors. He is in the office of the assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division.

"Tell the jury," Kelley said, but Miss Coplon shot back:

"I want to look you straight in the eye, Mr. Kelley!"

In black anger her eyes stared straight at the rangy prosecutor across the 10 feet of space between them.

Her bosom heaved. Her brunette curls tossed in fury as she accented her words with sharp movements of her head.

Her fluency, checked Tuesday by the dramatic prosecution surprise about the nights with Shapiro, returned in a rush.

"All Came Out With the Tie"

Unchecked, she told that Shapiro was "an acquaintance of mine whom I met in Washington, one of the men I was going out with;" that he told her he loved her.

"This all came out with the tie," she said.

This was the tie she bought for Gubitchev for a Christmas present. It is one of the only two things she ever gave the Russian, the other being Toll House cookies. She never gave him secrets from FBI files, she has repeatedly said.

Word piled on word, sentence on sentence, with no pause:

"I asked Mr. Shapiro whether he would come with me and select a tie. I was not too sure as to my taste, as to what I could select. He came with me and I bought the tie in his presence. He asked me who the tie was for. I told him it was for someone in New York. (She bought the tie at Lewis and Thomas Saltz on G st. here, she had said earlier.) I told him it was for an engineer in the United Nations. I went into the whole discussion with him, the engineer with the United Nations. I told him that he was a Russian. He said, 'Do you realize what you are doing?' I told him what he, Mr. Gubitchev, told me his political views were. I told him that Mr. Gubitchev had expressed a desire never to go back to Russia, that he had nothing to do with the Russian government. Mr. Shapiro argued with me. He argued with me after that constantly. On New Year's eve I saw Mr. Shapiro. You brought that up. You explained that we went to a friend's apartment. I would like to explain that background."

Her eyes never left Kelley's but stared hotly at him.

"Explain it," the prosecutor said cooly.

"Mr. Shapiro and I went to several parties that evening," she picked up, talking a mile a minute. "Mr. Shapiro had borrowed this apartment from a friend of his to invite a few people up there. As it was, I got sick. Unfortunately I am not a drinker. I got sick. I drank some champagne and I had some other stuff and it made me very ill. Mr. Shapiro suggested that I come to this place and get it over there. I do not know if you know McLean Gardens, Mr. Kelley. But I had a room there. There are no toilet facilities in the room. There is not any place to make hot water or anything like that. I went there (to the apartment) . . ."

"Tell the jury," Kelley cut in.

Her eyes never budged from the prosecutor's eyes.

"I want to tell this to you. I prefer to look at you. I want to look at you straight in the eye."

She Wants to Explain

"These are the people who want to get the facts," Kelley said, "the jury."

"I hope you want the facts," the defendant bit back, her gaze unwavering. "I want to explain the dates you brought up. I want to explain those headlines which branded me as a harlot. I did not know you were going to stoop to this sort of thing."

"It is your deeds," the prosecutor said softly, "that we are inquiring into."

"You brought up a weekend," Miss Coplon, a Barnard College honor graduate, continued with scarcely a pause for breath. "It was a weekend, that was true. I went to Baltimore and I went to Philadelphia. We (she and Shapiro) went to Baltimore because I wanted to get a suit in Baltimore, a woman's suit, because I felt that Washington was a little limited in clothes. We went that evening. I do not know how he registered. He was in the room with me, that is true. He never slept in that room, did not stay in that room. His bags were not in that room. He kept on talking to me about this whole incident. This was January 7. I told him that I intended to see this man (Gubitchev) again, that I wanted to see him.

Didn't Love Shapiro

At the time nothing had happened as to the wife incident (Gubitchev had not yet told her he had a wife), Mr. Shapiro said he wanted to marry me. I did not want to marry Mr. Shapiro. I was not in love with Mr. Shapiro. At that time I thought he was a gentleman and very sweet friend and a confiding sort of friend. I saw Mr. Shapiro that weekend. Nothing ever happened that you intimated happened. Mr. Shapiro left me in the morning. I do not know where he went. I fell asleep. I closed the door. I told him I did not want to have this kind of discussion. I was exhausted. We went on to Philadelphia the next day."

Kelley asked: "Why?"

"Because I wanted to go to Wanamaker's or Gimbel's in Philadelphia. I was still interested in getting a suit. We went to Philadelphia."

Kelley rocked back easily in his chair and asked in quiet tones: "Didn't you find the suit in Baltimore?"

"Miy I finish this?" Miss Coplon exploded back. "Yes, I went to Philadelphia. I do not know how he (Shapiro) registered. He did not make any improper advances to me. You said I had breakfast in bed. I had breakfast in a room. I was fully clothed. He had gone to get the newspapers. Mr. Shapiro kept on arguing with me. I fell asleep. I fell asleep on the bed. I was fully clothed, as I was New Year's Eve. I was fully clothed," her voice shrieked.

"What time?" interposed Kelley, his normally steely voice continuously in these questions was kept in the softest tones.

"I want to finish this," Miss Coplon shouted again, sitting forward on the edge of her chair, projected toward the prosecutor, her face aflame.

Kelley Unruffled

"Then we came back. It is true, I have seen Mr. Shapiro. I have seen him nights in February, as you intimated. That is very true. I have been to his apartment. I have been to his apartment and might have stayed over."

Kelley, totally unruffled, toyed gently with a pencil: "What do you mean by 'might have'."

"I mean I stayed over a few times in his apartment, for no immoral purpose at all. I stayed over fully clothed. . . ." Her voice did not hesitate as she stormed to a climax:

"I would like for you to bring Mr. Shapiro or the FBI agents who surveilled us or the dictaphones in the room. I have come to the conclusion that Mr. Shapiro and everything is part of this whole frame-up."

Her voice, which had continued non-stop except for brief interposings from the prosecutor—came to an abrupt, detonating stop on the word "frame-up."

Her arms sank like lead on the arms of her chair. A great quiet settled over the jammed courtroom.

She Has and Has Not Finished

Kelley, who attended Columbia University as an undergraduate and she attended Barnard, the university's woman division, though in different years—waited.

Eyes of defendant and prosecutor held.

Kelley turned his pencil over idly and said:

"Have you finished?"

Even now Miss Coplon had and had not finished. "Yes," she said. Then she added: "I will have more to say."

Kelley waited another moment, sat forward slightly. Then, methodically but relentlessly, he launched into cross-examination on what Miss Coplon had just so stormily gone through. He asked:

"What time on Saturday night did you arrive in Philadelphia?"

"We arrived too late to go to these . . ."

"What time?" Kelley's voice cut in now, still quiet but this time razor-like.

"About 7, I think—or 6."

"When," the prosecutor asked, "did you plan to buy a dress in Philadelphia?"

"We (she and Shapiro) made bad time," Miss Coplon said. "That was not my fault. I fell asleep during the driving. I was not driving the car. I do not know how to drive a car."

Kelley handed up a sheet of paper to the clerk as Miss Coplon watched. "Mark that Government Exhibit 165 for identification," he said, and continued:

"What time did you check out of the hotel in Baltimore?"

Miss Coplon looked up at the ceiling, then her eyes came back to the prosecutor. Her hands moved in one of her frequent gestures.

He Offers Suggestion

"Maybe about noontime."

"I suggest," Kelley said, "that it was about 3:30. Does that refresh your recollection?"

"One second," Miss Coplon said quickly. "I do not know what time we checked out. I went out and we ate outside and then we came back and got our bags."

Q. (from Kelley): What time did you go in the lobby in the hotel in Baltimore Friday night?

A. About 11 or something. I do not remember these dates.

Q. Who was carrying your suitcase?

A. Mr. Shapiro.

Q. He had one of his own?

A. He had one of his own.

Q. You walked in the lobby together?

A. We did.

Q. You walked up to the desk?

A. I did not walk up to desk.

Q. Where did you go?

A. I was in the lobby.

Q. Tell us where.

A. I do not remember where. I was in that certain region of the lobby.

Q. Where in the lobby in relation to the registration desk?

She Indicates Where

Miss Coplon indicated: "Assume the registration desk is here. I was in this vicinity."

Q. How do you explain your presence in this one room if you had no idea he registered as man and wife?

A. He told me he had another room.

Q. He told you that?

A. He told me that, exactly.

Q. Why didn't you register for your room if you thought you had a single for yourself?

A. Why couldn't he register for the two of us?

Q. Why should he?

A. He said he would take care of the registration.

Q. You had the same thing in Philadelphia the next night, I presume?

A. He took care of the registration.

Q. The same thing when you went in the Bellevue-Stratford, "I will take care of it and you wait"?

A. I do not know. I sat around and he took care of it.

Q. And you never had an idea on the 7th or the 8th (of January this year) that you were registered as man and wife?

A. I had no idea until you brought that photostat over to me in some handwriting, and it said, "Mr. and Mrs." I thought I had a room of my own.

Q. Why didn't you pay the bill?

A. Because he offered to pay the bill.

Q. Why do you let men pay the bill?

A. Why couldn't he?

Q. Why should he?

A. He made more money than I did. It was a gracious gesture.

Q. It was?

A. It was.

At this point Kelley picked up "Government's Exhibit 165," arose from his chair, walked along the jury rail to Miss Coplon in the witness box.

"Very Interesting"

"Tell me," he said, handing her the sheet of paper, "if that refreshes your recollection as to what you did in that hotel room that night."

Miss Coplon's eyes scanned down the page. "This is very interesting. I would like . . ."

"Does it refresh your recollection?" Kelley, standing at her side, repeated.

The defendant answered brusquely, angry again: "It does not refresh my recollection in any sense."

"Does it refresh your recollection," Kelley continued about the sheet of paper, "as to what you did on the night of New Year's Eve?"

Her Face Is Coldly Furious

(This is the night about which Kelley had asked Miss Coplon: "Did you not spend New Year's Eve of this year with Mr. Shapiro, in fornication, in an apartment of a friend of his in this city?" and she answered "I did not.")

"It does not refresh my recollection in any sort of manner you want it refreshed on, for your own purpose," Miss Coplon said, her face coldly furious.

"Does it refresh your recollection?" Kelley repeated yet again, "on what you did during the nights you stayed at his apartment?"

Miss Coplon answered curtly: "I told you my story."

(The mysterious sheet of paper was never put in evidence, remaining only "Government's Exhibit 165.")

"You still state," Kelley said, "that you went to Philadelphia to buy a dress? You did not even leave Baltimore until almost 4 o'clock."

"I want to explain that," Miss Coplon said, and her hands started to move in now-flowing, now-sharp gesture. "We went to Baltimore. He (Shapiro) mentioned the sort of suit involved, the man-tailored. I said I was not particularly interested, it was too short. I said, 'Let's go to Philadelphia,' or he suggested it, to go to Wanamaker's and see what we could do. I had no idea how many hours that was going to take. We got in. It was late. I said, 'It is too late.' He said, 'Let's go to Philadelphia and maybe we can take in a show.' When we got to Philadelphia we went to one theater. I do not remember what was playing. Mae West or something. No, it was some sort of show at the theater there."

"Didn't you tell us just a moment ago," the prosecutor said, "that when you did not find what you wanted in Baltimore that you then went to Philadelphia to get a dress?"

"I beg your pardon," Miss Coplon said, "I did not say I did not find what I wanted in Baltimore."

"Did you shop in Baltimore?"

"No," the defendant said. "I asked him exactly what kind of place this was. I said, 'Maybe we had better go to Philadelphia; I would rather go to Wanamaker's or Gimbel's and get a dress.'"

Kelley bore down slightly on

Ban on Hoods Clears Hurdle in Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., June 22 (U.P.).—A committee of the House of Representatives of the State Legislature today approved a law banning public wearing of masks or hoods despite bitter opposition by officials of the Ku Klux Klan.

The committee swept aside claims that the KKK has a divine mission to maintain white supremacy and wears hoods as "a memorial to our grandfathers."

The Klan said it would take its fight to the people before the measure can be brought up in the House next week. The Senate has approved the bill 23 to 3.

Three witnesses, a minister, a contractor and an electrical worker, denied before the committee that the organization had anything to do with recent acts of violence by men in hoods in the Birmingham area.

William Hugh Morris, Birmingham roofing contractor and a governor of the Federated Ku Klux Klans, said adoption of the bill would be "an insult to the men who wore the hood and robe in the '60s and '70s." It is a part of Southern tradition, he declared, and today's Klansmen are "blood descendants of those men who have taken the same name and same robe that they had, for the same reason."

The Rev. Alvin Horn, Talladega County pastor of three Baptist churches, said the Klan "had no part in some of the actions taken in the past several weeks."

"I'd rather be hung from the balcony over the steps (of the Capitol building here) where Jefferson Davis was inaugurated, than have the masks taken from the Klan," he said.

A. D. Driver, a Klansman since 1923 and an employe of an electric company, said it was his duty to screen applicants for membership. He makes sure they have no criminal record, are of good character and attend church, Driver said.

Morris said the Klan objected to "honky tonk operators, common brier-patch prostitutes and people of that type," but had committed no floggings and would "disband if it is proved guilty of any crime while wearing the hood."

mittee," he declared. "We are not the Un-American Activities Committee."

Celler added that procedures would be worked out by Byrne's subcommittee, but Byrne said he knew nothing about the matter except that his subcommittee had been designated to handle it. He said he supposed Celler would work out procedures as chairman of the full committee.

At the Justice Department, a spokesman said the Alabama cases were being studied to determine if any Federal law had been violated.

The decision to go ahead with the investigation was announced by Celler after he had conferred with Byrne and Representative Walter (D., Pa.). Walter is a member of the Un-American Activities Committee as well as of the Judiciary body.

Walter agreed with Celler that the committee should be careful not to interfere with action by Federal or local authorities. But, he insisted, "we should find out how serious or widespread this is."

Fears Confusion of Issue

An Alabama Democrat, Representative Battle, who represents Jefferson County, in which the incidents took place, felt that interference by Federal authorities might "confuse the issue." State and local officials, he said, already were taking action to end the reign of terror in his district.

He said he already had talked with an assistant of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and had been assured the crime-busting agency "would do everything possible in its jurisdiction.

Battle expressed concern over the incidents and admitted doubt as to where the responsibility might rest.

"It seems like the Klan in some instances," he said, "and in others it seem to be groups of workers."

The Federated Ku Klux Klan has offered $500 for proof that its members were involved.

Housing Cost

Now that the housing bill is before the House, with the prospect of a vote on Friday, the opposition to it, perhaps realizing that some measure is inevitable, is concentrating upon cost. The antis will have their inning when the debate reopens today. Cost, however, should have been their tack from the very beginning. The fact is that the American people had long ago come to the conclusion that, to specify one of the programs, Government action alone could clean out the slums which infest every American city. And they know that the cities simply must have financial aid if they are to undertake any extensive rehousing programs. What figure is involved for the Federal budget is not easily susceptible to computation; it all depends upon the extent of the loans that are recapturable. The extremes on this point are represented by the President and the real estate interests, but the sum, even if spread over a number of years, is bound to be considerable, and must weigh in legislative calculations.

For the Federal Government is rightly concerned about economy as long as business initiative is in the doldrums pending the firming of prices at lower levels. Pump primers contend that public housing construction would provide the necessary stimulus to private enterprise. This is not the lesson of economic history. What pump-priming is apt to do while construction prices are high is simply to confirm levels which make private building prohibitive. In these circumstances it would not seem out of order to reduce the initial proportion of the irrevocable commitments upon which the Government would enter as a result of these programs for such large amounts covering such long periods. As we said on June 5, "even for the replacement of slums with decent housing for low-income families, expenditures must be kept within the limits of a sound fiscal policy." Nevertheless the social reasons for a Federal program are overwhelming. Expense does not minimize the urgent need for getting a public housing act on the books, and we trust the House will realize that need in affirmative action.

Superseniority

The protection of seniority rights afforded war veterans by the Selective Service Act was intended only to put them on a parity with fellow workers who were not drawn into uniform. It did not confer on the servicemen any privileged or special status. This seems to be the gist of the commonsense opinion delivered by Justice Frankfurter for a unanimous Supreme Court on Monday in the case of Aeronautical Lodge v. Campbell. In line with previous decisions, it emphatically rejects the doctrine of superseniority.

Three veterans brought suit against the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. for compensation for a period during which they were laid off while union chairmen of the Aeronautical Industrial District Lodge 727, to which the veterans belonged, were retained in the company's employ although they had less seniority than the veterans. The retention of the union chairmen was in conformity with a collective bargaining agreement between the company and the union made during the absence of the servicemen. It was designed, like many similar agreements, to assure continuity in office for the union's representatives and thus to benefit all the union's members. The special status conferred on the representatives was desired by the union in order to facilitate collective bargaining negotiations in the interest of all the members, the veterans among them.

The court was quite right, it seems to us, in holding that the veterans were in no sense disadvantaged by this provision of the union's contract with the company. It preserved their parity with their fellow workers, just as if they had never been absent, and was no more to be rejected by them than any other change, such as an improvement in wage rates, for example, achieved by their union through the collective bargaining process. As Justice Frankfurter put it, the Selective Service Act gave to every serviceman "the status of one who has been 'on furlough or leave of absence' but uninterruptedly a member of the working force on whose behalf successive collective agreements are made.

"In this way the act protects the furloughed employe from being prejudiced by any change in the terms of a collective agreement because he is 'on furlough,' but he is not to be favored as a furloughed employe as against his fellows." Any other interpretation would result in endless acrimony and rivalry between veterans and nonveterans.

Arab Refugees

The Arab-Israeli Conference at Lausanne is so deadlocked that there has been a suspension of talks till the delegates get fresh instructions. The air is full of recriminations. The Arabs insist that the Israelis are ducking the United Nations resolution of last December 11 which said that the Arab refugees should be permitted to return to their homes and that this should be facilitated by the Conciliation Commission. The Israelis retort that the December 11 resolution is not so restrictive. They say—and they are right in so saying—that the refugee problem was made all of a piece with a peace settlement, but that the Arabs will talk about refugees but not about a peace settlement. The effort to promote a meeting of minds seems to have put the Conciliation Commission in a state of exhaustion and exasperation.

In the meantime the condition of the refugees seems to be worsening, and this is of concern to civilized society. There have been few tragedies in history comparable to the enforced deprivation of domestic ties of millions of people by the war and by the subsequent transfer of populations. This applies to Arabs no less than to Jews and to the Volksdeutsch. Contrary to what some Israeli spokesmen say, many of the Arabs in Palestine were attached to their homes in Palestine, and they want to go back there. It doesn't matter to most of them, contrary to what used to be said during the hostilities over Palestine, whether sovereignty is Israeli or Arab. Indeed, they may have a preference for the new sovereignty of a people who have made Palestine thrive and prosper. Some of them used to work in the orange groves, and, with Israel short of such workers, would be helpful to reconstruction in the new state. However, the Israelis cannot be sure of the allegiance of all the refugees. Obviously there is a security or a fifth column problem involved so long as a technical state of war continues to exist. And it is by no means alleviated by the "second round" talk of the Arab press or by the Bevin decision to resume arms shipments to Arab countries.

The prospect of a general settlement will recede if the present recrimination is maintained. The key to Arab willingness to talk peace is said to be some serious move by the Israelis to repatriate the refugees. But they have made not one move, but several. What are they? On the record there are two: first, an offer to reunite broken families, and, second, an offer to take responsibility for the 250,000 refugees cooped up in the Gaza strip, about 20 miles of coastline 4 miles deep, in return for that strip. In addition, in principle they have agreed to validate the property rights of the refugees and to unfreeze their bank accounts. Are these not serious offers while the war is still in a state of suspense? This is certainly the appearance they give, though they were tardy in coming forth, and the acknowledgment of property rights applies neither to urban homes nor to uncultivated land.

It would seem to us that since multilateral negotiations seem to have had no promising results, bilateral negotiations should be encouraged, and might begin with the issue with Egypt over the Gaza strip. Here is the locus of the greatest concentration of the refugees. Since Egypt and Israel came to an armistice when their representatives were brought together at Rhodes, why not let them try to come to a peace agreement between themselves. There is no subject except that of the refugees which justifies any comprehensive negotiations. Pressure in this direction, however, presupposes a united Anglo-American policy in the Middle East based upon live-and-let-live and forward-looking development that, unfortunately, still seems to escape the diplomacy of both countries.

Unification Talk

Louis Johnson's talk at the War College Tuesday gave evidence that the new Secretary of Defense brings a broad philosophical understanding to his job. Mr. Johnson views his responsibility as that of accepting the best judgment of military planners, and then of integrating that judgment with the national welfare. That, in synthesis, is the reason for having a civilian head of the military establishment. As Mr. Johnson phrased it, "to exercise civilian control of our military institutions is not to abrogate military command but to guide it conscientiously in accord with the economic and political policies of this Nation."

The immediate field for such guidance is in the military budget. Mr. Johnson has shown a realistic appreciation that, in view of the gigantic cost of defense today and the no less important need for a bulwark against aggression in Europe, it is essential to get every dollar's worth of outlay. The alternative to unified and efficient management is, as Mr. Johnson said, sacrifice of the American standard of living. Accordingly, if the military is to live within bounds of a strong economy, no service can be solely the judge of its own requirements.

This problem in unification is not simply one of knocking heads together. As Secretary Johnson notes, differences exist "among earnest men formidably equipped with expert opinion." However, these differences cannot always be resolved satisfactorily to all parties, and if there is to be decision rather than stalemate, superior authority must be applied. That is why a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the post filled temporarily by General Eisenhower, is so necessary.

The Joint Chiefs are not yet a completely satisfactory instrument, but their usefulness will improve as they think beyond individual services to the totality of defense, as they hew to and amplify the definition of roles and missions. Secretary Johnson did well in this context to try to disabuse the Navy of its persecution complex, to stress the interdependence of all services. Air Secretary Symington made a similar point the other day in emphasizing that, irrespective of the concern with strategic bombing, two thirds of the regular Air Force groups are equipped primarily for air defense and support of land and sea operations.

There exists among some persons the fictitious notion that the country somehow could get better defense by spending more money willy-nilly among competing services. The prime apologist for this view is Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee, who so far has sat on the Tydings bill to strengthen the authority of the Secretary of Defense—though hearings are scheduled to start, at long last, next Tuesday. Secretary Johnson estimates that the additional powers in this bill will enable him to save 1½ billion dollars in integrated defense planning. Is the opposition of a few diehards who have not accepted the fact of unification worth that much to the country?

Contact Man

The New York Herald Tribune has revealed in documented detail a specific instance of a practice now believed to be common in Washington—the sale of influence, or, rather, of pretended influence, by commission contact men in securing Government contracts for small businessmen. The treasurer of a Massachusetts woodworking firm, believing that he could not secure a Government order without the aid of such a middleman, retained one who professed himself a bosom friend of numerous officials in high places. No evidence has been presented that this particular middleman, or any of the others, actually did anything to earn his commission—that is to say, secured any business through personal influence which would not legitimately have been obtained through direct solicitation by the firm he represented.

Thus, in many respects the most interesting aspect of this extremely interesting story is the gullibility and naivete of the businessmen who seek the services of these "5 percenters." The legend of the run-around, of bureaucratic red tape, of the Washington maze and of the Government official as a remote and unapproachable, if not corrupt, figure—a legend largely invented and perpetuated by businessmen themselves—has been their own undoing. They have been hoist, so to speak, by their own canard.

When he first took office as Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson promised vehemently to drive these 5 percenters out of the national military establishment and said that he was available personally to any businessman with a legitimate proposition of interest to his department. It is hard to see how the Secretary can do much more than this. He cannot keep acquaintances or even men whom he has never met from using his name with alluring overtones of intimacy. Neither can he abjure all association with men who choose to take advantage of and abuse his past friendship. He can only resolutely refuse to be influenced by such men. And in the absence of any evidence to the contrary it seems but fair to assume that Mr. Johnson and others whose names have been bandied about by the 5 percenters are mere innocent victims of the swindle they have been perpetrating.

Several investigations of the 5 per cent racket have already been initiated or promised. We congratulate the Herald Tribune for instigating them. If, as we expect, they uncover no official malfeasance at all, they will render a real service to the business community by exposing a situation which has assumed the proportions of a racket. And they will relieve Government authorities of an embarrassing nuisance. The 5 percenters will cease to exist, of course, as soon as businessmen cease to employ them.

Perle's Oyster

The independent Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is 999 square miles in area. It is, therefore, just a little more than three quarters the size of Rhode Island, listed as the official residence of Mrs. Perle Mesta, newly appointed United States Minister to Luxembourg. The population of the Grand Duchy is estimated at close to 300,000, which puts it considerably below half of Rhode Island's population. But, like Rhode Island, its people are industrious and enlightened.

Mrs. Mesta, whose activities as a society hostess are not limited to the boundaries of Rhode Island, as most Washingtonians probably know, ought to find Luxembourg a congenial and similarly unrestricting field of action. Heretofore the diplomatic business of the United States has been handled by the Ambassador to Belgium with his left hand. It ought not to be too burdensome to Mrs. Mesta, or to keep her so preoccupied that she cannot, if she wishes, demonstrate her social talents throughout the entire area of the Western European Union.

Mrs. Mesta's appointment, we fear, is going to be a shattering blow to Washington society editors and writers. But it should make the Luxembourgers rejoice. For the acquisition of a United States Minister of their very own gives the Grand Duchy added recognition as a coequal partner in the Atlantic Alliance.

"Promise To Count On"

Your June 16 editorial titled "Promise to Count On" seems bottomed in error and misconception.

It is one thing to urge that there is "an obvious need for gradualism" in the abolition of prejudice in and of itself. One doubtless has the right to preclude from his intimate personal and social acquaintance whomever he may desire, and he may do this upon any ground which may appeal to his individual taste. This is true so long as the right of his neighbor is not impinged. But there is no concomitant right to deprive another of what is his as matter of course.

The Supreme Court was not "utopian," "idealistic," "gradual," or "unrealistic" in 1920 when it decided that a municipality may not deny its Negro citizens the right to purchase property, under guise of the police power. Nor was it unmindful of the "gradualist" argument there raised: "race riots will result unless we are gradual in allowing Negroes and whites to live side by side." Nor was that court "gradual" in its approach to the 1948 Restrictive Covenant Cases.

Secretary of Defense Johnson did not leave to some vague tomorrow the requirement that segregation in the military be disposed of.

The short answer to the "gradualist" doctrine lies in the fact that statutes prohibiting segregation languish unheeded upon our statute books. We Washingtonians thus blatantly violate controlling law. Gradualism means, in this case, that the wrongdoer must be palliated and pampered, while the injured must look stoically to some uncertain tomorrow for redress. Its reasoning, or the want thereof, is indicated in the well-considered editorial appearing upon the same page entitled "The Law's Delays."

There is no "obvious need for gradualism" in requiring that the Board of Education and the citizens of the District comply with the provisions of the law. There is nothing utopian or idealistic in requiring that District children be sent to the public school nearest their homes, and permitted to play in public recreation facilities wherever situated—and this immediately, the feelings of the Confederacy to the contrary notwithstanding.

Military Pay Incentive

I find myself in disagreement with many of the letters written by the service wives. Their complaint is that the present pay of officers is not enough to live on. It is my idea that an increase is being considered not because the pay is of the starvation classification, but because it is not large enough to attract the best officer material. I have seen enough of my husband's Naval Academy classmates resign to know that the Navy does not appeal to many of its best junior officers. My husband's class was made up of 1047 at graduation. Three years later only 75 per cent remained. All of these were eligible for promotion but only 50 per cent stayed to be promoted.

Two groups have resigned and two have remained. The obvious misfits and those who didn't like the Navy as a career made up one group which resigned. The other group was made up of the most competent men in the class. This group could see that with their abilities they could go much further on the outside than the average college graduate and could depend on better working conditions. Of those remaining, the men who really like the Navy and have ability, make a bright spot in the picture. The other group is made up of those who lack ability and couldn't make a go on the outside. Theoretically these men should be eliminated by the Navy promotion system of attrition but because of those who voluntarily resign can probably stay in until they are ready to retire.

It seems to me that the problem is to get those of ability who resign, to stay in and through competition eliminate those less competent. An increase in pay would act as an incentive for many of these to stay in. MARY E. STOUT.

Accident Pictures

I should like to register my complaint against your policy of printing accident photographs such as the one of June 20, entitled "Women Troubled by Auto Wreck."

In the first place it's pretty hard on the women photographed to have their faces, blood-smeared and distorted by pain and worry, enlarged for all The Washington Post reading public to see, and in the second place, it's pretty tough on the readers viewing such a picture as they leaf through the paper at breakfast. And what good does it do? It just puts your excellent paper in the class with its sensational contemporaries.

Vivisection Alternative

Vivisection should be abolished and success in this depends upon an enlightened and informed public regarding the basic fundamentals of cause and effect and its relation to health.

Today, after hundreds of years of animal experimentation, our mass degeneration is more cause for alarm than the atom bomb. As evidence of this, the front pages of our daily newspapers tell the sordid story of our national state, both physical and mental. In addition, our hospitals bulge with patients and constant demands are made for funds to increase hospital facilities. Further evidence is the fact that compulsory health insurance and socialized medicine are proposed as cure-alls.

In attacking the problem of national health, our public officials might well concern themselves with our depleted soils, our devitalized foods, synthetic environment, and our commercial greed. There is abundant evidence today to show that both man and animal are afflicted with earth disease, as a result of our depleted soils and devitalized foods grown thereon. How can a carrot contain the vital nutrients essential to man's existence if grown in unhealthy soil?

That the public health is being pilfered is crystal clear but vivisection is not the answer because man's state of well being, as well as that of animals, depends upon the life elements in the food produced and eaten. And vivisection does not restore one atom of life-giving elements to our soil and food.

Atlantic Pact Threat

The Atlantic Pact contains a mechanism by which the President might exercise a dictatorial power over the domestic concerns of the United States.

This result might be attained through decisions of the Supreme Court which affirm the following doctrines:

The United States, in foreign affairs, is a sovereign nation possessing unlimited powers. The restraints of the Constitution do not apply to the Federal Government in its foreign operations. A treaty (the supreme law of the land) may confer from one branch of the Government powers not granted to it by the Constitution. Most of the unlimited power of the United States in foreign affairs is vested in the President. Congress (or the Senate) by official act (a law, joint resolution, or treaty) may direct the President to exercise Congress' share of this unlimited power. Domestic concerns of the States may be regulated under the authority conferred by a treaty.

The pact proposes to erect a super-government; an Atlantic Council, a defense committee, and such other bodies as may be necessary to implement the treaty.

The pact would give this super-government an unlimited jurisdiction. The pact declares that it is the purpose of the United States to act with the other members in such a way as to promote their (and our) well-being capacity to resist attack, stability, and defense. Any action on any subject, foreign or domestic, might be justified by these inclusive terms.

The actions of the super-government, when approved by the President, would have the force of a United States law. The measures of the super-government would bear the vast inherent authority of the President in foreign affairs, plus the power of Congress in that sphere, as delegated to the President by a treaty. Such measures would have been formed in a manner authorized by the Constitution, for the purpose of giving reality to the highest aims of the United States, as expressed in the supreme law of the land.

The super-government would be devised in such a way that the President might secure, through it, measures that would apply to the domestic concerns of the United States. Undoubtedly, the President's agents in the super-government would be in touch with his agents in charge of disbursing E. R. P. funds. This would offer a means of gaining approval for the President's proposals. Moreover, the recommendations of the super-government would not automatically acquire the force of law in any country other than the United States. The non-United States representatives might assent to the proposals of the President because their actions would not bind their respective countries. The United States alone has a written Constitution which defines a treaty as the supreme law of the land. Only in the United States would the actions of the super-government, when approved by the President, automatically acquire the force of the supreme law of the land.

Once the President had proclaimed such measures to be the supreme law of the land, they could be modified or repealed only by act of Congress. The President could veto such act of repeal. Hence it would take a two-thirds vote of each house for Congress to legislate in opposition to the measure of the super-government.

The Atlantic Pact thus offers a device for scrapping our Federal system and our scheme of checks and balances. They would be replaced by what would amount to an Executive dictatorship. CURTIS P. NETTELS.

"FBI Standards"

Your June 18 editorial on the availability of FBI reports is in the right direction but seems not to go far enough. There are ample precedents for keeping Government records secret; two examples of records that are not open to public inspection are the proceedings of grand juries, and income tax reports. It would seem feasible to require by law that the materials collected by the FBI should be available only to the President, to the Department of Justice as a basis for prosecution, and to those agencies, to be designated by the President, whose work requires drastic protection against possible disloyalty.

A sufficient reason for limiting closely the availability of this material lies in the fact that statements to FBI agents are protected against libel suits, so that there is no effective protection against slander. E. K.

New American Landscape

By Malvina Lindsay

Old Homestead Change

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A train trip across the country these days reveals how change is coming to the American landscape. The postwar building program is beginning to transform vistas. It gives a newness and brightness to city suburbs and even to the drowsiest of small towns. Color is more in evidence—blue and lavender roofs, pastel shutters and trimmings. Fewer reminders of the "brown decades" remain.

Many farm homes are newly roofed or freshly painted. Many former gray or dirty-red barns are white with shining tin roofs. In the fields, tractors plow and cultivate, though here and there a horse or mule is at work. Baby shrubs and trees are getting a start in the bleak yards of new subdivisions. On all sides there is a reaching toward tomorrow.

But there are hints of other, more subtle change. While most of the new housing is conventional, some reflect new tendencies in American life. Some indicate we may finally be getting ready to break our last tie with the Victorians—that of shelter.

OCCASIONALLY, a traditional farm homestead flits past the train window. It may be a lonely two-story house with cedars or locust trees in the yard. Occasionally a small town "big house" with bay windows and gingerbread woodwork is visible. Sometimes one sees the big squat bungalow of the early 1900s or the groups of now drab cottages that were the new little homes of the building boom of the 1920s.

One feels a little depressed looking at some of the new city building—the rows of standardized little houses, the blocks of duplexes, the acres of grim "institutional" apartments. Why so much regimentation? Wouldn't a little more beauty have been possible?

Yet the need for houses, any kind of houses, was desperate. No time for frills or esthetics. No money for them either with building costs so high. At any rate most of these new little peas-in-a-pod houses are being owned, or at least being bought, and they may some day be given individuality by loving hands. Not since 1900 has there been so much home ownership in this country. Now nearly half the population owns its own shelter.

Occasionally on the landscape appears a low, rambling, many-windowed house—today's successor to the substantial home of yesterday. This "ranch house" seems stark in its severity, humble in its crouching pose at first glance. It is not self-sufficient nor withdrawn like the houses of the past, architects explain, because the modern family's life is closely tied up with the community. It is not imposing nor decorative because "face" is now sought by other means than the towering mansion. Light, air, convenience, comfort, economy—these are the goals of today's householder.

FEW TRULY modernistic homes as yet show up though their number is increasing. Some architects, impatient over the public's slow acceptance of new design in housing, have charged Americans with hanging on to outdated homes because of a desire to escape social change, also because they were steeped in folklore and sentimentality about housing.

National love of the colonial tradition or addiction to nineteenth century architecture have strongly influenced American homes, as the landscape shows. But the number of new houses tending toward the one-story, open-planned arrangement that expands horizontally is impressive. These promise more open air, casual living, less dependence on servants, and more flexible family life.

Both in the small and larger houses the plainness of appearance and emphasis on functionalism is marked. Could Americans be becoming more practical and hardheaded, less concerned with impressing the Joneses?

These bailiwicks of home-owning Americans in cities, towns and on farms seem a strange jumble as they flash past a train or a motor car. They speak of many housing booms, many patterns of family living. What housing mistakes and what advances will come out of this postwar building program no one can say now. But no one can look at the constant sprouting of new homes in every city and town without sensing the vitality of the American family and its faith in the future.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Before They Meet Again

LIPPMANN

BEFORE they can resume their discussions with the Soviets in the autumn the Western powers among themselves have serious and very difficult work to do.

The honeymoon period of the Marshall Plan is over. And the Atlantic Pact, after it has been ratified, will have to be supplemented by new arrangements in order to make it relevant to the developments in Germany. Both Marshall Plan and Atlantic Pact have been successful—the one in averting a collapse and unmanageable distress in western Europe, the other in reducing the danger and the fear of military aggression.

BUT THE satisfaction we are entitled to take in these achievements must be tempered with the knowledge that both the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact are unfinished business. They are unfinished not merely in the sense that they require continued support from Congress and the people but in the harder sense that both are elementary and now quite inadequate for the period into which we have entered.

AT THE Pilgrims Dinner in London last week, held in his honor, Mr. Thomas K. Finletter said, in conformity with the law which he has administered with such distinction and grace, that "the prime objective of closing the dollar gap by June 30, 1952, must dominate all our policies which relate to the recovery program." But while Mr. Finletter was speaking, Washington and London were worrying each other over the Anglo-Argentine trade agreement. This agreement, which Mr. Hoffman told the Senate was a "dreadful" departure from the American ideas of open trade, is the direct and, from the British point of view, unavoidable result of making the closing of the dollar gap "dominate" all British policies.

The core of the agreement is that the British are to buy Argentine meat for four years paying in sterling, and the Argentine is to use this sterling to buy British, instead of American, oil. The agreement means that Britain will not buy meat and that the Argentine will not buy oil from American producers. But this arrangement, which unquestionably discriminates against American producers, is due to the fact that neither Britain nor the Argentine has, or has any good prospect of earning, the dollars to buy meat and oil from America. Britain has to discriminate against producers who can be paid only in dollars that she does not have.

So if, as Congress has laid it down, the dollar gap is to be closed by June 1952, then by 1952 the area in which men buy and sell in dollars will be closed off from the area in which men, who lack dollars, do their buying and their selling.

THE ANGLO-Argentine agreement illustrates sharply and vividly the basic truth that the Marshall Plan, as now conceived and operating, will not and cannot restore world trade or unite the free nations in a prosperous economy. The tendency is the other way—towards separatism, restrictionism, economic isolationism and—as the productive capacity of Germany and Japan increases—towards cutthroat competition.

To reverse this sinister tendency will call for measures as far-reaching and as bold as the original Marshall Plan itself. And we shall not have much time in which to plan, negotiate, and agree upon those measures. Nor can we afford to indulge in prolonged self-congratulation about the limited successes we have achieved. The acid test of Western cooperation is ahead of us and still to be met.

IT WILL be no less necessary to work out a supplementary understanding to the Atlantic Pact before we risk another open diplomatic encounter with the Russians. At Paris M. Vishinsky, for reasons which are obscure but probably originate in the Soviet troubles with its uneasy satellites, relapsed into a perfunctory proposal to return to Potsdam instead of proceeding with the formidable program of the Warsaw Declaration. That was Mr. Acheson's good luck. For the Western powers have yet to reach an agreement among themselves which would stand up as a constructive reply to the Warsaw program.

There is no reason to think that the Warsaw program, with its irresistible appeal to the Germans, has been permanently scrapped. For it is not likely that the Russians will go through with an Austrian treaty calling for military evacuation if they mean to maintain the military occupation of Germany. If they really intend to have the Red army leave Austria, it is almost certain that they would not uncover their southern flank unless they expected also to have the Red army leave Germany.

IT IS for this eventuality that the Atlantic Pact was originally designed by those who first conceived it. But the necessary military agreements with France, the Low Countries and Britain are not yet worked out. They will have to be worked out to solve the problem of how the United States is to insure concretely the security of western Europe against a revival of German militarism, against a German-Russian political understanding when, as is inevitable, the partition and occupation of Germany have to be ended.

That problem is not insoluble. But it is immensely difficult. It will not be safe to risk another meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers without a satisfactory answer to the problem.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

The Atom In Politics

NEW YORK.—The political decisions taken in Washington tend to seem more politically motivated when viewed from a little way off. A case in point is the extraordinary development in the investigation into the Atomic Energy Commission.

Childs

The investigation had proved to be a pretty empty business. Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, who initiated it with reckless general charges, was reduced to scratching up trivialities. It had dropped into the back pages of even those newspapers interested in smearing the civilian commission and Chairman David Lilienthal in particular.

In the face of all this, Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Joint Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy, comes out with the proposal that his committee have the veto power over the supposedly independent commission. They would exercise this veto power by passing on any enterprise involving the expenditure of more than one million dollars.

That is, in effect, a finding of guilty against Lilienthal. If Hickenlooper had been shrewd, he would have said, "Gentlemen, I see that I have made my case and I have nothing more to say."

The full implications of that veto have not been fully appreciated. I doubt that even Senator McMahon, who has battled for civilian control, is entirely aware of what such a veto would mean.

It would have put the atom right in the middle of politics. That is not my view alone. It is the view of those who have had most to do with the control of atomic energy at the international level.

PROPHECY, as some recent events have shown, is a dangerout undertaking in matters political. But, in my opinion, if Congress took up McMahon's suggestion and approved this veto power, the following would happen:

1. Lilienthal would resign as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and the strong probability is that two or three other commissioners would leave.

2. President Truman would find it difficult, if not impossible, to persuade a civilian of stature to take the vacated chairmanship.

The crowd out to "get Lilienthal" might rejoice at this outcome, but I believe their rejoicing would be very temporary. Political control exercised through such a veto would inevitably retard atomic development. Those who know say that under such circumstances the United States very quickly would lose its present lead.

Pressure groups working through the Senate-House committee would interfere in every decision taken by the commission. This is not just theory. A recent example shows how such pressures are brought to bear and what the consequences are.

The Atomic Energy Commission had decided to build a natural gas pipe line to the great Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic project. The decision had been taken after weighing all the factors—cost, accessibility of supply, security and dependability of the fuel supply. The best technical brains available had passed on it.

But then certain pressure groups began to turn on the heat. The railroads, the coal miners, the coal mine owners all came down on the congressional committee. They didn't want a gas pipe line to Oak Ridge; they wanted coal used at Oak Ridge.

THE JOINT Senate-House committee named a subcommittee to look into the proposed pipe line. That subcommittee disapproved it and was supported by the full committee.

Nevertheless the AEC is going ahead with the pipe line. One reason is the fact that the commission has what is believed to to an irrevocable contract with the company that would build the line and furnish the gas.

If that kind of interference is possible, and it would be possible under the veto advocated by McMahon, then there could be no orderly operation of the vast atomic energy project with its billion-dollar budget. Politics would dictate vital decisions.

Senator McMahon, who has in the past shown such a sense of responsibility, would not be likely to say, "Look, why doesn't my State of Connecticut get more of these atomic plants; we need them up there." But politicians with less understanding of what is at issue might well say just that.

An independent commission is bound to make mistakes in an undertaking so large. But if able and good men are chosen, they must be allowed to make their own mistakes, since their independence and their ability will insure a satisfactory overall result. A political veto would nullify their independence and circumvent their ability.

Soviet Policy Unchanged, Acheson Says

By Robert S. Allen

Crux of Secretary Dean Acheson's personal report to President Truman was that the Paris conference had disclosed no basic change in Russian foreign policy.

The Kremlin rulers have been forced to modify their tactics somewhat. They are less openly provocative in their talk and relations. Vishinsky eschewed his usual prosecutor antics in Paris. But behind this studied civility, the mailed fist of Soviet imperialism is as unblunted and unregenerate as ever.

In his report, Acheson made no attempt to glamorize what little was achieved in Paris.

He said the concessions Moscow made on Austria were motivated chiefly by hatred of Marshal Tito and the desire to harass him. Similarly, the very limited accord reached on Berlin was due to the desperate need of the satellite countries for Allied goods and equipment.

Acheson said frankly the Russians still could make trouble under the agreement on Berlin. He would not hazard a guess on whether they would do that, but loopholes exist that would give the Russians ground for raising technical obstacles if they decide to revive turmoil. For that reason, Acheson strongly counseled undiminished retention of the Allied airlift.

It is now operating between 40 and 50 per cent of capacity.

Acheson stressed that the Russians are now convinced the United States is headed for a deep depression. Vishinsky made several sly references to this in talks with Foreign Ministers Bevin and Schuman. It was evident, Acheson reported, that Moscow is counting on rising unemployment and other economic difficulties to revive isolationism in the United States. The Kremlin appears convinced it is only a matter of time when straitened domestic conditions will force the United States to withdraw from Europe and the Far East.

News Conference Skipped

The White House said yesterday President Truman will forego his weekly news conference today because of a heavy work schedule and lack of news.

Anti-Poll-Tax Bill Approved By House Unit

By The Associated Press

The House Administration Committee yesterday approved an anti-poll-tax bill. In doing so, it reversed its own subcommittee.

The legislation would make it illegal to require payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting for a Representative, Senator, Vice President or President in either a primary or general election.

Eight States still have poll taxes. President Truman has made the abolition of these voting requirements a part of his civil rights program.

The subcommittee had recommended that action on this bill be deferred until the House Judiciary Committee had a "reasonable" time to act on a proposal to submit a constitutional amendment banning poll taxes.

Mr. Truman, at a recent news conference, said those who want a constitutional amendment are stalling, and that the job can be done by legislation.

The committee agreed with him, by a vote of 11 to 7.

At least two hurdles still confront the anti-poll-tax bill: the House Rules Committee and the Senate. Especially the Senate.

The Rules Committee, acting as a sort of legislative traffic director, decides when and if proposed legislation is to be debated on the House floor.

Southerners opposed to the bill are influential on the Rules Committee. But even if it is held up here, it can be called out under a new House rule adopted this year.

This would allow Chairman Norton (D., N. J.) of the Administration Committee to call for a House vote after the Rules Committee has had the bill 21 days.

Backers of the bill claim there would be fewer than 100 votes against it on a House roll call.

Should it pass the House, the bill undoubtedly will run into rough going in the Senate. The House has passed anti-poll-tax bills before, but they have been killed in the Senate by filibusters, or the threat of one.

States having poll taxes are Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

In another development involving Mr. Truman's civil rights program, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee heard two witnesses plead for a bill that provides for the appointment of an assistant attorney general to head an enlarged civil rights division in the Justice Department.

Lawyer in Hotel Was Part of 'Frameup,' Miss Coplon Screams at Cross-Examiner

the next question: "Did you tell Mr. Gubitchev on February 18 that you spent the prior night in Shapiro's apartment?"

"No, I did not tell him on February 18," Miss Coplon said. She said then with something of the tone of undercover sarcasm that has been the norm between the two protagonists, in the voices of both, and was prevailing along about this point: "Would you be interested in what I told Mr. Gubitchev on January 14?"

Both February 18 and January 14 are dates on which FBI agents had under surveillance Miss Coplon and Gubitchev in New York before arresting them there March 4, charging her with espionage and both with conspiracy to commit espionage.

"Surely," Kelley said, he would be glad to hear what Miss Coplon said to the Russian January 14. "You told him all, did you?"

Thought Him a Gentleman

"What do you mean, all about this?" she snapped, then went on: "I told him about the tie I gave him. I asked him why wasn't he wearing the tie. I had given him the tie Christmas. I said to him, 'I feel slighted, you do not have the tie on.' I said, 'You know, that tie got me in an awful lot of trouble.' I told him about Mr. Shapiro, that he confessed he was in love with me, and had debated with me about not seeing him, about not being in love with someone else, that he wanted to marry me. I told him about Mr. Shapiro, who I then considered a gentleman and a truthful person."

Q. (from Kelley): Why didn't you tell Mr. Gubitchev that you had spent the former weekend with him (Shapiro)?

A. I did not think it was important that I happened to spend a former weekend . . .

Q. Why?

A. Why should I? You tell me why should I.

Q. You said it was important to tell him about Shapiro and the necktie.

Didn't Use His Name

A. I did not mention Shapiro by name. I told him about the incident and the tie and what had happened. I told him this man had been pleading with me not to see Gubitchev but to see him.

Q. Why didn't you tell him the rest of it?

A. What is the rest of it?

Q. About the weekend.

A. Why should I say, "You know I went to Philadelphia last weekend to get a suit?"

Q. On February 18 did you tell him you spent the 17th in Shapiro's apartment?

A. I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. I did not think it was of any importance. I considered Mr. Shapiro at that time a personal friend, a platonic friend.

Q. How many nights in February did you spend in Mr. Shapiro's apartment?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Why did you stay there? You had an apartment of your own.

"Going Crazy," She Says

A. I did not have an apartment of my own. I had a little room (in McLean Gardens). Because I was going crazy the month of February.

Q. You planned in advance to spend the night there? You packed your bag and took it over.

A. I packed my bag, because I was planning on going to New York. Mr. Shapiro told me he would take the bag with me to Union Station the night before so I could deposit it there and pick it up on the train.

Q. It was not a case of staying late . . . you anticipated staying the night?

A. I stayed over, but I did not anticipate it when I packed my bag. He said he would take the bag with me to Union Station. I came there . . . Mr. Kelley, you do not understand my state of mind during the month of February. In additon to this whole Gubitchev business, you do not know what was happening to me in the office.

"Not the Office," He Says

(This was an apparent reference to the "sadistic" treatment Miss Coplon says she was getting from her boss, William E. Foley, in the Foreign Agents Registration Section along about this time, when she was under surveillance by the FBI.)

Q. We are talking about another thing—hotels and apartments. Not the office.

A. I am talking about Mr. Shapiro. I am talking about the reasons why I sought out Mr. Shapiro. I am talking about the reasons why we talked to each other.

Q. You had to sit up all night many, many times to do that?

A. Not many, many times. We did not sit up all night many, many times. I went there. I was half crazy.

Doesn't Remember Apartment

Q. What apartment was this of Mr. Shapiro's friend on New Year's Eve? Where was that apartment?

A. I do not remember. It was a rather modern apartment house, I think, around Connecticut ave., up around there. I do not remember. In fact, I do not remember whose apartment house it was. It was not important to me.

With a twisted smile, Miss Coplon suggested earlier that Shapiro has informed on her to the FBI or the Department of Justice.

"Who was with you?" Kelley asked when she told of shopping for a tie here to give Gubitchev last Christmas.

"Miss Microutsicos and Shapiro," she said, and then added as if to herself: "Mr. Shapiro must have told you he was with me."

Woman Also a Lawyer

Shapiro is a lawyer in the General Adminisrative Procedures Unit of the criminal division of the Deparment of Justice. Miss Microutsicos was identified as a lawyer in the Civil Rights Section of the same diviison.

Her personally-conducted defense in the "harlot" matter was not the only tempest that came from Miss Coplon during the day's session.

Another, only less violent, fell on the courtroom in her description of "this whole brutal treatment" she said she received at the hands of FBI agents.

Miss Coplon has testified that shortly before FBI agents closed in on her and Gubitchev in New York March 4 and found confidential FBI "data slips" in her purse, she had been "petrified" by the information from the Russian that the NKVD, the Soviet secret police, might be following them instead of his wife's detectives, as he had previously thought.

She Answers Sardonically

"Why didn't you," Kelley asked, "throw your arms around the FBI agents and say, 'Thank God, you've saved me from the NKVD?'"

"It would have been difficult," Miss Coplon replied sardonically, "because they had their arms around me."

"Didn't you feel relief," Kelley asked, "that it was the FBI and not the dreaded NKVD?"

"If you want to know what I felt, Mr. Kelley," the defendant said bitterly, "I felt it was some kind of frameup.

"What seemed to me like 100 agents seized me," she said, ". . . I sensed some sort of frameup, especially since I saw Mr. Whearty (her former boss) in the FBI building that night . . .

"You don't know the dark terror this can bring on you when FBI agents call you the filthiest names. . . ."

Kelley asked if she thought she had been "brutally" treated, why she didn't tell the judge before whom she was arraigned that morning. She said she knew nothing about legal matters, courtrooms, and also that she felt this "dark terror."

"Is that your feeling about this whole thing," Kelley asked, "that you are being framed?"

"Yes," Miss Coplon said through tight lips.

"Framed?" Kelley repeated.

"Yes," Miss Coplon said.

At another stage she said Gubitchev told her he was seeking American citizenship, having become anti-Soviet. Kelley asked her why, as their romance continued with possible marriage in the offing, she didn't ask him, "Val, how are we doing with this citizenship?"

The defendant's eyes flashed. "You don't think I would marry anyone who was not an American citizen?"

"Did you ever contemplate going back to Russia?" Kelley asked.

"No."

"What alarms you at that?"

"You intimate that I would go to . . . I never wanted to go to Russia," Miss Coplon said, the anger on her face again. "I would not marry a man who was attached to the Soviet ideal."

"I see," Kelley said.

Palmer, the defense lawyer, jumped to his feet, asked these two words be stricken.

"Sit down," Judge Reeves ordered, shaking a finger.

Then finally came the outburst from Palmer that prompted Judge Reeves' sharpest warning of the trial. A flareup had occurred between Kelley and Palmer over the latter's constant physical proximity to the prosecutor, sitting near at his side, popping to his feet and coming between him and the jury, Kelley claimed.

Palmer shouted about "my rights" and Judge Reeves, who has fined him twice for contempt, leaned over the bench.

"You've been extended all the rights," he said sternly. "Mr. Palmer, the next fine on you will not be a fine—it will be a jail sentence. I want you to understand that."

"I understand," Palmer said, hurrying back to his chair right back of Kelley's and to the prosecutor's right. He waited then added: "May I take an exception to your honor's statement?"

"You may," the jurist clipped back.

April Video Sales Spurt 157% Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Electric appliance sales in the Washington area showed a mixed trend in April, with television again prominent on the upside with a 157 per cent increase over last year.

April video sales totaled 2796 against 1084 in the same 1948 month, according to figures supplied yesterday by the Electric Institute of Washington. Radio sales also showed decided improvement.

In the plus column also were sales of refrigerators, oil burners, ironers and vacuum cleaners. Trending lower during the month were electric ranges, refrigerators, washers, water heaters and roasters.

Retail sales figures for April and the first four months for Washington and two nearby Maryland counties follow:

| | April. | | Four Months. | |

DIVIDENDS: Bank of Commerce & Savings declared an extra dividend of $1 a share and the usual quarterly $2.50 dividend on capital stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 20. A similar extra was declared in the same period last year. Washington Gas Light Co. voted the regular quarterly dividends on two classes of preferred stock, payable August 10 to stock of record July 25. The regular 37½ cents a common share also was declared, payable August 1 to stock of record July 15.

ODD LOTS: The District Public Utilities Commission has filed a formal petition to intervene at the Securities and Exchange Commission public hearing Tuesday on North American Co.'s proposed sale of a block of Capital Transit Co. stock . . . Military personnel will receive a 10 per cent discount on rail and air travel in the fiscal year starting July 1, it was indicated yesterday . . . Bache & Co. has completed an analysis on major oil fields in Canada . . . Edward M. Powers, retired Air Force major general, has been appointed vice president and director of engineering for Curtiss-Wright Corp. . . . National Radiator Co. will resume full production Monday at its New Castle, Pa., plant and rehire 550 workers.

NEW DEPARTMENT: In charge of Johnston, Lemon & Co.'s new investment trust department is Bernard J. Nees, a former president of the Washington Stock Exchange. Associated with Nees are Richard O. Covington, formerly of Asheville, N. C., and internationally known tennis star, and Percy R. B. Lawrence, formerly head of the New York investment firm bearing his name.

BANK HISTORY: Although it probably will not have the general appeal of the Kinsey Report, a book entitled, 'Bank Failures in the District of Columbia in the Twentieth Century' is just off the Catholic University press. It was written by Sister M. Alexine Beatty of Regis College in Weston, Mass. The 272-page work points out that from the high point of 50 banks in 1922, the number of Washington banking institutions has dwindled to the present 19. The local bank failures are listed by name and date and their ratios are analyzed. The book, written in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of doctor of philosophy, should be in every bankers' library for reference. Arthur J. Linn, former comptroller of Hamilton National Bank, was one of the collaborators.

OUT OF THE RED: Northwest Airlines reported net income of $524,661 for May, reflecting record gross revenues of $3,578,729 in that month. For the same 1948 period, the airline system reported a net loss of $22,030 and gross of $2,856,348. April and May profits have reduced the net loss for the first five months this year to $591,159.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

ELECTIONS: Newly elected officers of the Sales Executives Club of Washington are: H. H. Goodman, president; Norman H. Barnes, first vice president; William M. Murray, second vice president; Bruce Emerson, secretary, and C. Claude Hellman, treasurer . . . Washington Claim Men's Association, representing more than 100 insurance firms and independent claim adjusting offices, elected as follows: Morgan S. Gassman, president; Milton C. CROPS—From Page 1

Weather Fouls Crop Forecasts

as 40 pounds." (Wheat should test 60 pounds per bushel).

Erickson then added: "This is a poor milling quality year—rusted wheat makes poor flour. Perhaps 25 per cent of the crop will be rejected by the mills. They can't make flour out of bran."

Agriculture Department experts wouldn't predict any degree of loss. They will wait until the next monthly report, due July 11. All have heard reports of heavy losses, although there are equally as firm reports that losses will be slight.

The Northwestern Miller, organ of the milling interests, disputes Erickson's predictions.

Reports from Nebraska and Kansas tell of both stem and leaf rust, and losses from green bugs, mosaic disease, and other infestations and infections.

An agriculture department expert on such wheat ailments, Dr. James F. Martin of the Bureau of Plant Industry, reported June 14 that the "rust is light so far." He will issue another report today.

Recent rains in Virginia and Maryland have aided in overcoming serious drought threats here, although this week's weather and crop report stated that rains were insufficient to prevent further damage on the Eastern Shore.

The drought is still serious in New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

"Many crops are declining in Pacific States due to droughty conditions," the report stated.

From the Midwest came reports that the Nation's greatest crop, corn, is in unusually good condition, although the greatest infestation of corn borers ever known is reported from Iowa.

Some private forecasters predict Iowa's corn crop this year may be even greater than last year's all-time record of 3½ billion bushels.

As the result of vast corn supplies both present and potential, the Midwest farmers are growing a tremendous number of pigs.

The Agriculture Department yesterday estimated the 1949 pig crop at 59,040,000 head. This is 15 per cent bigger than last year's crop.

This huge crop will be ready for market as meat this fall and winter.

The department also forecast a fall pig crop this year of 37 million, as compared with about 34 million last year.

Government livestock experts say that if yesterday's survey is borne out, the supply of pork late this year will probably be greater than the demand at price support levels.

Under existing law, the Government would have to buy and remove from the market enough pork to keep hog prices at the guarantee level. Agriculture Secretary Brannan has asked Congress for authority to use a subsidy payment method of carrying out hog price supports. This method would allow consumer prices to go lower than would the present support system.

Wheat prices had indicated that traders are counting on some wheat losses. July futures, for example, have gone from $1.86 on June 6 to $2 a bushel.

THE RAINFALL PICTURE—Shaded States are those which have received a normal or above normal rainfall, while all the others have suffered dry spells. Numerals indicate the percentage of normal precipitation. As a result of the rains in the indicated areas, prognosticators predict this will be a "rust year, the worst since 1935"

Contract Let For Widening S. Glebe Road

The award of a $638,677 contract to rebuild 1.57 miles of Arlington's winding South Glebe rd. was announced yesterday by the Virginia State Highway Commission.

Under the contract, Glebe rd. from Columbia pike to a point slightly east of Shirley Memorial highway will be changed from its present two-lane size to a four-lane divided highway.

It will have two 22-foot concrete traffic lanes, a 4-foot middle strip, curbing, gutters, and 5-foot sidewalks.

W. H. Scott, Franklin contractor, was awarded the contract on his low net bid submitted June 14, the commission said.

The 1½ miles of construction is part of a long-range program to make Glebe rd. a four-lane divided highway from U. S. Route 1 to Fairfax dr., the following the general path of the Glebe rd.

The highway commission estimates the entire Glebe rd. project will cost $445,777 a mile, including administration and engineering costs.

'Night Must Fall'

Olney Does Better By Williams' Danny

"NIGHT Must Fall" enjoys a unique place in the modern drama. If it wasn't first, it was certainly the first good melodrama about a psychopathic killer.

Back in the mid 30's Emlyn Williams, the Welsh playwright, created Danny, the bellhop: a weird blend of adolescent vanity and murderous menace. Since then Broadway and Hollywood have given us dozens of psychopaths, trying to explain their conduct in moments of stress via the stock, bearded psychiatrist.

Emlyn Williams never tried to explain Danny; he presented him as he was. The result is that "Night Must Fall" remains about the best of the genre. You can prove it to yourself by going out to the Olney Theater this week and seeing it.

As if to make amends for the mistreatment of Mr. Williams in last week's "Corn Is Green," the group out on Route 108 is doing much better with his work this week. True, there have been more polished and better directed productions of the play, but this one isn't at all bad. The acting is of a higher caliber than one usually finds in a summer circuit production of the piece. This is especially true of the two leading roles of Mrs. Bramson and Danny.

Viola Roache plays Mrs. Bramson, a miserly old pseudoinvalid sadistically enjoying the domination of her household in a bungalow in the woods near Essex, England. Olivia Grayne, played by Pamela Simpson, is her younger, poor relation, dependent on Mrs. Bramson for her livelihood. Hubert Laurie (Ralph Sumter) is a stuffy bore who wishes to marry Olivia. Mrs. Terence, an outspoken cook (Philippa Bevans), and Dora Parkoe (Mary MacArthur), a dizzy maid, complete the household.

"NIGHT MUST FALL," by Emlyn Williams. Presented by Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman. Staged by Harry Ellerbe, setting by S. Syrjala. At the Olney Theater.

An Obvious Killer

Simultaneously with the news of a murder in the neighborhood comes the arrival of Danny, the bellhop from the Tall-Boys, a resort in the vicinity. Leon Janny is Danny. He has been sent for by Mrs. Bramson. She wants him "to do right by Dora" for having seduced her. Danny charms the old lady to the extent she hires him to take care of her.

Williams isn't intent on writing a misleading mystery play. The audience knows almost from the beginning that Danny is the murderer. The playwright is more intent on showing Danny's characteristic vanity, his evilly subtle mind and his effect on Olivia, who is positive that Danny is the murderer but is still in love with him.

Intuitively knowing that Danny is planning the murder of Mrs. Bramson, Olivia can do nothing about it. She exists in a state of semihypnotic stupefaction, almost hoping that she will share vicariously in the thrill of the murder.

Most readers already know what happens, since "Night Must Fall" was made into an extremely successful movie starring Robert Montgomery. If you don't, you're not going to find out here: Mr. Williams' penchant for suspense is contagious.

To get back to the acting. Viola Roache is fine as Mrs. Bramson. The brusque cantankerousness, the petty tyranny, the senile vanity, the pitiable fright when she is left alone in the house—all the facets of the character are admirably displayed. Although the part has been played by many actresses, we doubt if it has ever been done as well.

Brashness Overstressed

Leon Janney, as Danny, has the intellectual understanding of the part but he seems to be static in the emotional realization of it. You can't help feeling that he has accented the brashness of Danny's character to a point where it is out of perspective with the more sympathetic aspects of it. To this reviewer, it seems that to slight the pitiable sickness in Danny is to misunderstand what Williams was trying to do. This sickness explains a great deal of Olivia's fascination, a fascination which is really profound pity, the sort the Dannys of our society need.

Pamela Simpson is good as Olivia. The sexual repression, the introversion, the incipient paranoia are all in her creation. Ralph Sumpter repeats the role which he played last week, Nigel Bruce, but this week he's 20 years younger. He's probably a very fine actor; he is being cast at a disadvantage.

Philippa Bevans has not been given a chance to display any versatility, since her role is almost the same as the one she played last week. Still, she does well with it. The same remarks go for Mary MacArthur. Again she's cockney and again she's having an illegitimate child. Let's hope she breaks type soon.

Sedentary Emotion

Maintaining the same low with which he started last week, Harry Ellerbe has done another unimaginative directorial chore. Somone should tell him that in moments of emotional crisis the nervous energy engendered by a situation would demand physical expression. Instead, Ellerbe's actors make for the first piece of furniture, squat, get comfortable and then proceed to pour out the turmoil in their souls.

Syrjala's set is appropriate to the mood of the piece. It doesn't call attention to itself but rather helps by being somber in decor. Whoever worked the lights did a bad job at the end of act two; the mood was completely destroyed by the sudden dousing of half the board. Hope it doesn't happen again.

As we said before, if you want to see the granddaddy of all the psychological thrillers, then run out to Olney this week. You'll not be too disappointed. JOHN M. COPPINGER.

Tracy's No Morley in Film 'Edward, My Son'

SEVERAL years ago, Robert Morley, the British actor, collaborated with Noel Langley, a playwright, to fashion a piece of theater tailored to the talents of Mr. Morley. It was called "Edward, My Son," opened in the West End, and was an immediate sensation. After an extremely successful run, Morley brought the play to New York, where the critics almost unanimously discerned that the play wasn't as good as the performance of the star.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer doesn't seem to have been as discerning as the critics. They bought "Edward," but failed to buy the man who made it so successful. Playing safe, they put a "name" in the leading role: Spencer Tracy. In doing that, they made a fundamental mistake which is too late to rectify in this new feature at the Palace.

It isn't that Spencer Tracy isn't a good actor. He is, when he's cast in a part which fits his talents. It's just that in playing Lord Arnold Boult he lacks the urbane humor which made Boult likeable despite his repulsive obsession to go to any end to make the life of his son, Edward, an easy one. The result is that the central character emerges as an almost grotesque caricature of the devoted parent, rather than a credible human being.

The fault is not in the writing, because every once in a while the warmth and wit of the original sneaks through as if by accident. It is during these few light moments that one can see the lopsidedness of Tracy's creation. Instead of accepting his conduct as probably universal, if somewhat extenuatedly dramatic, one feels that he is a horribly evil man, and we are glad that he has gotten his just desserts.

Edward, the son, is never shown. He is merely the prop on which has been built the character study of his father, Arnold Boult. The latter's rise, from an obscure, middle class businessman in London, to a peer of royalty and finance, is the meat of the picture. From his first unlawful act of burning his furniture store to collect insurance for an operation on Edward, to the systematic and deliberate destruction of his own wife in sodden drunkenness, Boult is actuated by the desire to do right by his son.

Objectively, however, in criticizing the production, this reviewer must say that in spite of the failing in Tracy's performance, which could easily be the result of misdirection by George Cukor, the picture is an interesting one. Evil is a fascinating aspect of human existence and it's psychologically stimulating to contemplate it without being harmed by it.

In contrast to the evil of Boult is the goodness of his wife, admirably played by Deborah Kerr. Her performance overshadows that of Tracy in versatility and virtuosity. Her progression from the naive, sweet young wife to the alcoholic wreck is a rounded study in good acting. It's good to see that she has finally been given a chance to do more than look pretty.

The supporting cast are all British actors, and because they are strange faces they make the story more real and believable.

"EDWARD, MY SON," Directed by George Cukor, produced by Edwin H. Knopf, screen play by Donald Ogden Stewart, from the stage play by Robert Morley and Noel Langley. Music by John Wooldridge, played by the Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent. Photographed by F. A. Young, F.R.P.S. At the Palace.

Couple Found Dead in Bed

with the Reigers, and who discovered the bodies, her daughter-in-law had decided to leave her husband.

"He just couldn't stand it," the mother told reporters. "He must have loved her a lot."

The mother said she last saw the couple alive at 11 p. m. Tuesday when they walked from the living room of the one-story stucco bungalow to their adjoining bedroom.

She said she arose at about 7:45 a. m. and assumed that Frances had already left for her work as a typist at the Pentagon bldg. and that her son was sleeping late, as he oftentimes did. He had been in poor health, having trouble breathing, she said.

About noon, she said, she knocked on the bedroom door. There was no answer. She tried the knob. It was locked.

Then, she said, she walked to the front porch and from there peered into the bedroom window.

When she saw the pajama-clad bodies, she declared, "I thought they were sick. Then I called a neighbor."

The neighbor, after a hurried investigation, called police. This was at 1:10 p. m. Pvts. Donald Forsht and Charles L. Perrygo of the Upper Marlboro station, Prince Georges County police, arrived shortly afterward.

They found Mrs. Reiger lying on her back, her black hair matted with blood, which had dripped on the white sheet. Her husband lay across her body.

There were no signs of struggle, police said.

Miss Helen Reiger, 20-year-old sister of the dead man, who had suffered a nervous breakdown some time ago and who shared the bungalow, disappeared for several hours after the bodies were found. She showed up at the home shortly before 6 p. m.

According to the mother, Mrs. Reiger was supposed to pack and leave her husband today. A newly bought trunk was delivered early yesterday and was placed on the front porch.

The Reigers had been married 17 years. They had no children. During the war, neighbors said, Mrs. Reiger served as an enlisted WAC, stationed part of the time in Calcutta, India.

Reiger, a mechanical draftsman and head of a department with 169 employes under him, was born in White Stone, N. Y., and came to the District with his parents when he was a child. He was employed at the gun factory for 30 years.

Ezzard Charles Outpoints Walcott for Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 22.—In the dank Chicago Stadium, scene of the weighing-in, Jersey Joe Walcott wasn't talking. Neither was Ezzard Charles. At least to each other they had nothing to say and it was starting out as pretty grim.

Not until the photographers with their wonderful voice of authority barked "smile," did the fighters lose some of their sullenness and affect to be a little bit pally.

POVICH

On the fringe of the assemblage a round, puffy-faced little man was squinting at the two title contenders on the stage. "He could throw away that cigar and train for two weeks and lick 'em both," somebody ventured. "Sure, I'd moider de bums," said Tony Galento.

A gray-haired old gentleman with a neatly trimmed homburg to match, stood watching the whole thing with interest. That was understandable. Forty-four years ago he had a shot at the same title Walcott and Charles are fighting for, under peculiarly similar circumstances.

HE WAS Jack Root, and the boxing industry ought to offer him as exhibit A in evidence that all former pugs don't end up with thick tongues, scrambled ears and round heels. At 72, Mr. Root could be typed as somebody's chairman of the board.

Even as retired champ Joe Louis gave Walcott and Charles their title shot by tossing his title at them and saying "Here it is, fight for it," Root got his chance from Jim Jeffries in 1905. Jeffries had had enough. He designated Marvin Hart and Root, then the light-heavy champion, to fight for his crown and refereed the bout personally, at Reno.

Hart, the bigger man, won by a twelfth-round knockout. I weighed 164, Hart weighed 204," said Root. "But neither of us had counted on winning by anything except a knockout. The rules were different. They told us to fight to a finish . . . Nobody was going to win a decision. If all the little men were honest, they'd say it's tough to beat a big man."

THERE WAS another note out of the dim past. Charles stepped on the scales clean-shaven except for a thin wisp of a mustache that decorated his upper lip. "First contender since Kilrain to go into the ring wearing a mustache," somebody proclaimed grandly.

Joey Maxim, the one-time heavyweight contender who had fought them both, was saying he was picking Walcott to beat Charles. "I like Walcott to win," he said. We asked him why, and he was no less than astounding as he explained:

"Charles gave me a harder time of it. He's the best fighter. But I'm picking Walcott to win because I licked Walcott once and that would make me look good. I want another shot at the title, and Walcott would be easier for me to beat."

Eventually, his manager, Jack Kearns, rushed to Maxim's assistance. "He means," said Kearns, "that Walcott is the best fighter."

THE WHOLE PARTY'S public relations were bogging down badly midway of the ceremonies. Joe Louis, director of boxing for the IBC, whose official blessings on Walcott and Charles had raised the bout to something resembling title status, wasn't even being invited to appear in the pictures. He was finally grabbed, shoved, and led to the scales to pose with the fighters.

"No evidence of nervousness or excitement by either fighter," announced Dr. J. A. Houston of the Illinois Commission. "They're both in perfect shape," he added. For what it meant he announced that Charles' pulse was 70 at rest, 100 after a brief bouncing exercise on the stage. Walcott was measured under the same conditions at 72 and 90.

At 195½, Walcott was a pound and a half heavier than when he fought Joe Louis a year ago. There had been doubt that Charles would scale over 180. He weighed in at 181¾. "He gained ¾ of a pound since last night and he ain't had no breakfast. That shows my man ain't nervous," gloated his manager, Jake Mintz.

Decision is Unanimous, Joe Loses Lead in 7th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Comiskey Park, Chicago, Ill., June 22.—Ezzard Charles, trim 181-pound native of Cincinnati, zoomed to distinction as the No. 1 heavyweight of the world tonight by punching out a 15-round decision over venerable Jersey Joe Walcott.

The battle turned on a furious

Charles Is 'Dirty Fighter, Sneaky Puncher'—Walcott

Chicago, June 22 (AP).—Weary, worn and bitterly disappointed, 35-year-old Jersey Joe Walcott asserted he was beaten by a "sneaky puncher" for the NBA world heavyweight title tonight.

"I thought I won at least nine rounds," Walcott declared with head bowed on his exhausted chest in his dressing room at Comiskey Park. "Charles is a sneaky puncher. He hit me coming out of the clinches all of the time. When the referee broke us, I stopped punching, but that dirty fighter kept banging away."

punching fest by Charles in the seventh round when he recovered from a no-count trip to the canvas and rocked Walcott with blows to the head. Only his ring lore and instincts kept the 35-year-old Walcott upright in that round.

On the same site where Joe Louis won the undisputed title from Jimmy Braddock exactly 12 years ago to the night, the 27-year-old Charles came into recognition as world champion in all territory governed by the National Boxing Association.

But Not in New York

Still stridently dissenting from recognition of Charles is the New York Athletic Commission and the British Board of Boxing Control.

After a lengthy delay, officials announced the crowd at 25,932. The fans contributed a gross gate of $246,546.

The decision for Charles was unanimous by the two judges and Referee Davey Miller. The Judges score 78 points for Charles, 72 for Walcott. Miller's tab showed Charles in front at the finish 77 to 73.

For most of the first six rounds, Pappy Walcott, fancy-boxing father of six, was giving Charles, the young whipper-snapper, a complete boxing lesson . . . and then he ran into a long left hand to the head, and was caught backing up by two cruel rights, and it was the beginning of the end for Walcott.

Walcott Rallies Too Late

A desperate Walcott tried bravely to pull out the decision in the last three rounds, in a manful show of determination after apparently running out of gas from the seventh to the thirteenth. He fetched Charles many a smart wallop, but failed to offset the Cincinnatian's smashing seventh.

At the announcement of the decision for Charles, his manager, Jake Mintz, collapsed in the ring, and a stretcher was hustled in from the ringside. But his dramatic swoon was short-lived, and somewhat suspicious, as he bounced gaily to his feet and waved the stretcher-bearers away.

At the outset of the round that cost him the fight, the seventh, Walcott apparently was in complete command of Charles and on his way to the decision after winning four of the first six by varying shades. This reporter scored one round for Charles and one even, with the referee taking one round away from Charles for a low blow.

Walcott Staggers Charles

Walcott staggered Charles with a straight right to the head in the first half-minute of round seven, and then when Charles missed a hook to the body Walcott sidestepped and spun the younger man

Tigers Club 4 Bosox Pitchers For 18 Hits, Win, 13 to 4

Boston, June 22 (AP).—Detroit's Tigers enjoyed Boston pitching today as they clubbed a quartet of Red Sox pitchers for 18 hits and a 13-4 victory.

The loss, before 9,292 fans, snapped a Sox winning streak which had run through six games.

Hal Newhouser, who pitched shutout ball in relief over the last five innings, was the winning pitcher. It was the eighth decision for the left hander. He has lost six.

Johnny Lipon, Vic Wertz, Hoot Evers and Paul Campbell paced the 18 hits for 26 bases Detroit attack. Lippon hit safely on four of his five trips, driving in a pair of runs and scoring twice.

Wertz and Evers each drove in three Tiger tallies and Campbell, a one-time Sox chattel, got three hits in six times at bat to knock in two runs.

Aaron Robinson poled his fifth home run of the campaign in the sixth inning off Tex Hugson who replaced the starting, and losing pitcher, Joe Dobson, in the fifth.

The Tigers played without their star third baseman, George Kell, who discovered this morning he had broken a small bone in his right foot yesterday when he fell after trying to beat out a bunt. Kell will be out three weeks.

Mele Swats Homer

Wight Halts Nats for Chisox, 4-1; Hittle Fails in 1st Start

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Sam Mele failed to hit enough home runs and the Nats took it on the chin from the Chicago White Sox again last night.

Mele's homer—his first of the season—produced the only Nat score as the Chicagoans won the odd game of the three-game series, 4-1.

Each club made 10 hits, but the Nats squandered six opportunities to score, leaving 10 men stranded, and presented Lefthander Bill Wight with his seventh victory instead of Lloyd Hittle, the Nats' costly rookie pitcher, started his first major league game and it proved costly for the Nats. The $65,000 southpaw yielded three runs and seven hits before Mickey Haefner had to bail him out in the fifth inning. This offensive was quite ample in view of the Nats' futility when hits meant runs.

Wight Clutch Hurler

Six times the Nats had runners in scoring position, but that's where they remained, in scoring position only, as Wight mowed 'em down in the clutch.

Obviously tired of witnessing this wastefulness, Mele went for himself in the sixth inning, delivering a king-sized homer into the leftfield bleachers. The ball landed in the fifth row of the 90 cents customers, but counted for only one run, not quite enough to overcome the 3-0 advantage Wight enjoyed at the moment.

The Nats had runners on either second or third base in the second, third, fourth, sixth, seventh and ninth, but except for Mele none of 'em got close to home plate.

Southpaw Hittle showed the slim gathering of 5426 something in the first inning when he retired the Sox in order, but his troubles began in the second inning when a single by George Metkovich and the first of two doubles by Cass Michaels added up to the first run.

A double play got Hittle out of a slight jam in the third and he was in tip-top form in the fourth when he struck out Metkovich and Steve Souchock. In the fifth, however, he ran into a storm and Mickey Haefner had to go in and restore order.

Metkovich Robbed

Successive doubles by Bobby Rhawn and Joe Tipton upped the margin to 2-0 and Rookie Dick Lane drilled a single to increase Wight's lead to 3-0. It was then decreed that Hittle had had enough and Haefner came in.

After a wild pitch, he walked Luke Appling to load the bases and set the stage for one of baseball's rarer plays — a hit that wasn't a hit.

With the bases filled to capacity, Metkovich lashed a liner to left field and Johnny Simmons tried to make a shoe-string catch. He failed, trapping the ball on the first bounce.

Lane, on third, held his base, but when he saw Simmons had trapped the ball, he broke for home and Simmons rifled to Al Evans to force him at the plate. Metkovich's "single" turned out to be nothing more than a long force out.

Dick Welteroth permitted the fourth White Sox run in the eighth with a double to Michaels and three straight walks.

Yanks Lose, 5-1 Then Defeat Browns, 10-8

New York, June 22 (AP). — The lowly St. Louis Browns scared the daylights out of the front-running New York Yankees today before they were forced to accept a split in their double-header before 20,104 spectators at the Yankee Stadium. They handed Ed Lopat his fourth successive defeat, 5-1, in the opener, then knocked out Yankee Ace Vic Raschi in the nightcap, only to lose, 10-8.

The Brownies outhit the Yankees, 14-11, in the second game, but two of the Yankees' safeties were home runs by Bobby Brown and Tommy Henrich, the latter's coming in the sixth with one on to break an 8-8 deadlock.

Charles (Red) Embree, a former Yankee, allowed 11 hits and walked seven in the opener, but was superb in the pinches as he notched his third victory.

Macks Bow To Tribe In 14th, 7 to 3

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—Dale Mitchell's triple with the bases loaded in the fourteenth inning tonight gave the Cleveland Indians a 7 to 3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics. Bob Lemon, who was knocked from the box by the Athletics last night, came back in relief of Lefty Gene Bearden to gain credit for his seventh win of the campaign.

The As' sent the game into extra innings by tallying a run in the ninth. Joe Coleman started but Carl Scheib, who took over in the twelfth, was the victim of Mitchell's triple.

Favorites Bow At Rosecroft

Both the trotting and pacing track record holders were upset before 6175 last night on Rosecroft's Raceway's final program.

Track President William E. Miller's Henry Volo was nipped at the wire by Quick Reward in the pacing event, the seventh race.

Henry Volo set the pace most of the way but couldn't withstand the bold challenge of the winner, who paid $11.20 as second choice.

Joe Hylan's odds-on Buckshot B., trotting champion of the meeting, failed in the eighth race, the Au Revoir. Sidney Volomite, driven by Harry Allen, was the $17.60 victor.

Last night's crowd wagered $232,281. It sent the handle for Rosecroft's initial meeting zooming to $4,231,778. That amount topped the $3,707,051 bet at Laurel Raceway last year.

Only 8,957 fans paid their way to watch the Bucs pile up seven runs in the fourth and garner an even dozen by the end of the game. Seven thousand youngsters saw the game for nothing.

Naiman's Bows, 5-4, To Thrifty

Pitcher Sleepy Thompson locked the barn after the horse had been stolen, and his Thrifty Beverages team dropped a 5-4 Washington Post-Industrial League game to Naiman's Photo's yesterday on the South Ellipse. Sleepy yielded six hits and five runs in the first three innings, and pitched perfect ball for the last six innings. But it was too late.

At Mouth of Potomac

Phone Workers Nab 93 Fish on Off Day

By Ralph Murdock
Post Reporter

FROM DOWN AT the mouth of the Potomac River comes this report: A fishing party of eight C and P Telephone workers and two other Washingtonians had banner day at Cornfield Harbor while fishing with the able Capt. Plaub Drury who operates from St. James Creek. The "Bell" workers really flashed a "busy signal" by hauling in83 fish. The catch consisted of trout, hardheads, and spot. The largest croaker scaled 3½ pounds and a hefty trout tipped the beam at two pounds. The spot were average size.

Murdock

The phone gang were Perry Hardesty, Sam Dietrich, H. R. Drummond, Bert Williams, Wilbur Olin, Luther Jones, Paul Caseen, and Garland Stevenson. The other two successful anglers were Capt. Charles Williams and W. S. Olin.

MOVING UP THE bay to Solomon's Island, we received a long distance call from Capt. Edgar Bowen. Edgar said "The croakers have finally arrived in fair numbers. Our boats are catching an average of 35 to 45 big ones. I know it takes a big croaker to weigh four pounds, but we have had some that go above that."

Incidentally, Captain Bowen is the president of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association. The Fair will be held at Solomon's Island on September 16th and 17th.

FROM SOLOMON'S we take you to Chesapeake Beach where some of the finest fishing boats in the East cover the bay from the Gooses to Bloody Points.

Police Chief William Dubusky writes to tell of the improved fishing at this resort. Bill says, "The fishing has really picked up since Saturday evening, and they are catching perch, spot and croakers in anything that floats." The chief further adds, "The Rod and Reel Club at this beach can take care of a lot of hungry fishermen should the occasion arise. Several of the boats have been making the run to the Gooses for big stripers and have had excellent luck."

A CANVAS OF fishing captains at Herring Bay brings the same response, that the last four days have been what the doctor ordered. At this location, the skippers who chummed at Bloody Point for rockfish have shifted scenes. They are now trolling for the big ones at the Gooses (and we do mean big ones). Some 12 and 10-pounders were boated by Capt. Johnny Manifold on Tuesday. White perch fishing here has reached a new high.

An old adage that "when the wind is from the East the fishing is the least" went haywire when George Hamp of the Navy Department took his dad "afishing" in the upper Chesapeake Bay. George's father hails from Decatur, Ill., and his previous angling experience has been confined to fresh water streams. They procured a rowboat at Deep Cave Creek Farm and headed for the bay. The inboard motor didn't miss a stroke. They soon arrived on the fishing grounds. George quickly fitted him up with the proper tackle and the customary advice.

It seemed that the instructions were unneeded because George Hand sr., had the situation well in hand from the first cast. The father gave junior a polite spanking by hauling in ten big hardheads while the son was handling five.

A second group, which included Albert LaFave, caught 19 croakers. The latter catch was made with ¾ of a pound of frozen shrimp. The fish were still biting when the bait was exhausted.

Weekend Suggestions

Where they are biting:

HARDHEADS—The Gooses is our best bet. Catches up to 80 recorded in daytime. The time is unusual. Previously night fishing was best. Boats available at Kenwood Beach, Breezy Point, Chesapeake Beach, and Herring Bay. Fifteen to 25 can be picked up from Solomons to Shady Side. Frozen shrimp is the prescription. Fish in 15 or more feet of water. Shoal water no good at this time.

ROCKFISH — The whoppers are near the Gooses. Trolling with Buck tails and drones with pork rind does the trick. Some hefties of limit size are in this area. Chesapeake Beach and Herring Bay boats are at your service.

WHITE PERCH — Holland Point Bar at the mouth of Herring Bay is our best bet. Chumming gets the better results. Grass shrimp keeps them biting. Bloodworms for bait is our second choice. Nice catches should be had.

Typewriter Enters Hiss Perjury Trial

tie which contrasted with his normal robed courtroom attire, told Murphy, who was cross-examining him on one answer he gave:

"Well, let us not fence . . ."

"Well, you were the one that started fencing with me, weren't you, Judge?" countered the 6-foot-5-inch tall prosecutor in an aggrieved but respectful tone.

As the trial moved into the testimony of the two comparatively obscure Catlett witness, however, their testimony appeared far more likely to decide the guilt or innocence of Hiss than the statements of the many prominent character witnesses who have appeared for him.

Mrs. Catlett, a stout woman in a flowered dress, who wore dark glasses on the witness stand, said she worked for the Hisses from 1935 to September, 1938.

That employment was at the three Hiss residences most directly concerned in the case: 2905 P st. nw., 1245 30th st. nw., and 3415 Volta pl.

She said she normally worked from 8 a. m. to about 8 p. m.

Chambers has testified that he came to the Hiss homes about twice a week, making his first trip each time between 5 and 7 p. m. to pick up copies of the State Department documents he said were typed by Mrs. Hiss. He said he always returned with the documents late the same night he collected them, after he had them microfilmed.

The one time she saw Chambers, Mrs. Catlett said, was at the P st. house. She let him in when he asked for Mrs. Hiss, she said, and "looked at him closely" because "he wasn't dressed so good."

In one of six or seven interviews which Mrs. Catlett said she had with FBI agents, she told them she specifically remembered Chambers because "he did not look like the people who called on the Alger Hisses."

She "fixed some tea" for Chambers and Mrs. Hiss at that time, she said, and never saw him again until she confronted him in February, this year, during an FBI interview.

Previously, she admitted, she had denied knowing him by any name, because, she said, "the pictures they showed me didn't look like him."

But when she faced him, she said, she remembered him as "Crosby."

Hiss has stated that Chambers, whom he knew only as a free-lance writer over a period from 1934 to 1936, was known to him as "George Crosley," while Chambers says Hiss knew him as "Carl."

Mrs. Catlett is the only other person to state publicly that she knew Chambers by a name similar to "Crosley."

Today she said she could not be sure if the name was "Crosby" or "Crosley."

"Is it some name that could have been Carl, Crosby, Carlton or Crosley?" demanded Murphy.

"It could have been," she replied.

Murphy cross-examined her severely today in an effort to show she knew the name "Crosby" or "Crosley" only because it had been suggested to her. She insisted, however, that the name popped into her mind when she confronted Chambers.

"Aren't you very good on names?" he asked.

A. "No, I'm not. I'm good on faces but I'm not very good on names."

"Do you remember my name?" asked Murphy, who had interviewed her in May.

A. "I remember your face, but not your name."

When she saw Chambers on February 10, Murphy said, reading from a deposition which Mrs. Catlett gave at that time, Chambers said he remembered her "because you're the woman that can mash potatoes."

"Can you mash potatoes?" Murphy asked.

"Anybody can mash potatoes," she replied, disdainfully.

Chambers, she said, asked her about some furniture, including "gold-edged chairs" which he said had been in the Hiss home on 30th st. "I said, 'No, it wasn't on 30th st'."

"He said they had some yellow rugs on the floor . . . and I said, 'No, not yellow . . .'"

She said, "He was trying to make me believe he was at the 30th st. house and I know he wasn't.

"But he was right about the potatoes?" asked Murphy.

"I never took no potatoes to him," she replied.

Mrs. Catlett gave conflicting testimony on the typewriter her son Raymond said he and his brother received from the Hisses.

She denied, according to earlier statements to the FBI, that she knew anything about a typewriter, and at another point, said she remembered that the typewriter was moved "from P st. to 30th st. and from 30th st. to Volta pl."

Today she said she did not remember it until her Raymond reminded her about it.

This, she said, occurred some time after Raymond was at a conference held in February by Alger Hiss' attorneys at the Washington home of his younger brother, Donald.

Also present at the conference, according to testimony, was Charles Houston, jr., Washington attorney, who was described as having participated in the search for the missing typewriter.

Houston is expected to be among witnesses called to the stand today.

The prosecution announced, in the first trial session in Federal Court here, that "25 or 30" FBI agents "shook down the city of Washington to a fare-the--well" in an unsuccessful search for the Hisses' typewriter.

Immediately afterward, Chief Defense Attorney Lloyd Paul Strykner told the court hat following an involved search, the defense had recovered the typewriter.

The machine, an old upright model, was displayed in the courtroom today after 27-year-old Raymond Sylvester Catlett took the witness stand to describe his relation to it.

Like his mother, he said, he also worked for the Hiss family, but only a few days a week. He did odd jobs around the house, including car washing, at the P st., 30th st. and Volta pl. residences.

Catlett, who is now married and living at 2728 P st. nw., said he had never seen either Chambers, Chambers' wife, or their daughter at any of the Hiss homes.

He said he could not remember a key point — when he or his brother received the typewriter. But he said they received it at a time when the Hisses moved from one home to another.

Inasmuch as he said he ceased working for the Hisses sometime before he was married in 1940, his account placed receipt of the typewriter either in 1936 or 1937, for the Hisses did not move to Volta pl. until December, 1937, and moved from there in 1943.

Catlett said he was sure it was the same typewriter because he remembered when he received it that a knob on one side of the carriage was missing, that the keys stuck, and the ribbon would not wind.

He said the typewriter was passed among several members of his family, and he last saw it about 1941. It was in the P st. home, he said, for "three or four years," then was given to his sister-in-law, Ursula.

Later, he said, "my sister, Bennetta, got it." He said she had it when she lived at the home of the late Dr. Ralph Easter, 1127 48th pl. nw., "who raised her."

Last February, Catlett said, Defense Attorney Edward C. McLean, who conducted his direct examination today came, to Washington to enlist Catlett's help in finding the typewriter.

For a month, said Catlett, he talked with friends and relatives throughout Washington in an unsuccessful search for the typewriter.

Finally, according to his testimony, McLean himself found the typewriter and brought it to Catlett, and he identified it. It was not disclosed where the typewriter was found.

On cross-examination, Murphy tried to shake his story on the typewriter, but Catlett held to it in an exchange that frequently brought belligerent replies, causing Judge Kaufman to intercede.

Asked what he did with the typewriter when he had it, Catlett replied, "I typed my name on it."

Q. "How often did you do that?"

A. "Whenever I felt like it."

At another point:

Q. "What system do you use?"

A. "What system?"

Q. "Yes."

A. "One finger!"

"I was young myself," Catlett said in puzzlement at the laughter of spectators, "and if you was young yourself what would you do?"

"You're getting me all balled up," he later protested to Murphy's questioning.

"Now I don't want to confuse you," Murphy said softly, "do you believe me when I say that?"

A. "No."

"You wouldn't believe me . . .?"

A. "They warned me about people like you."

Q. "They, you mean the lawyers?"

A. "When I was growing up . . ."

The court session came to a close before the cross-examination concluded, and today Catlett will be recalled to the stand, and a brother, Perrl, will also testify.

In the earlier testimony on Hiss' character, Justice Frankfurter described it as "excellent."

He said he knew Hiss first as an editor of the Harvard Law Review, and in 1929 chose him from the entire body of law graduates as "the man I could most confidently recommend" to serve as law clerk to the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Defense Attorney Stryker, who lauded Hiss' relations with Holmes, in the opening statement of the trial, and said he might, if necessary, bring the "shade" of the late justice into the courtroom asked:

"I don't think Mr. Murphy would object if I asked you what Mr. Justice Holmes said about Mr. Hiss."

"I don't want to stray out of bounds," said Frankfurter, turning quizzically to Judge Kaufman.

"I think he should object," said the judge, and Murphy quickly put in, "I think I should, Your Honor."

When Murphy clashed with Frankfurter over Hiss' relations with Jerome Frank (who is now a United States district court judge sitting in the same courthouse here), Frankfurter said:

"I have a vague memory that some time in—while I was away in '33 and '34, when I was one year abroad visiting a professor at Oxford, and while abroad, unless I am wrong there, but about that time, during that period, there were some differences of opinion among lawyers and nonlawyers in the Department of Agriculture, and since several of them were friends of mine, including Judge Frank, I heard about that. But if you pin me down to what I heard and how I had come to hear it, I would find it impossible to answer.

"I repeat that I have absolutely no recollection and I would deny unequivocally having heard that whatever the differences were they affected loyalty to this country. I have no doubt on that subject whatever."

Justice Frankfurter said he could not positively remember if he recommended Hiss to Frank for the AAA post, but "I think it is highly likely that Judge Frank . . . would ask me for suggestions and I certainly would have recommended Mr. Hiss unqualifiedly . . ."

"Did you recommend Lee Pressman?" asked Murphy, but Stryker objected and was sustained. Pressman, also a Harvard Law School graduate and former general counsel of the CIO, has been also named by Chambers as a Communist.

Justice Frankfurter said, however, that he had "no unwillingness" to answer the question and declared, "I should say it is highly ur[illegible]."

His appearance in Hiss' behalf, said Frankfurter, was the first time he testified for anyone's character in a Federal Court.

Justice Reed, in brief testimony, said in 1935, when he was solicitor general, Hiss came to his legal staff as a special attorney.

Asked who recommended Hiss to him, he said "I know that I talked to Judge Frank about it."

"You're clear on that?" asked Murphy.

Reed said he was.

On direct examination, Justice Reed said he "never heard any question" about Hiss' integrity, loyalty or veracity.

Judge Magruder said he "saw a good deal" of Hiss when the judge was on the faculty of Harvard law school while Hiss was a student there, and "got to know him very well and he and I have been friends ever since." Hiss' reputation, he said, "is excellent!"

Governor Stevenson, who was special counsel to the AAA when Hiss was employed there, and later worked with him in San Francisco in 1935 when Hiss was secretary-general of the United Nations Charter Conference, said Hiss had a "good" reputation for character.

Another character witness for Hiss was Gerard Swope, jr., a lawyer for the International General Electric Co., and a Harvard Law School graduate, who said he worked with Hiss in a New York law office from 1932 to 1933.

He said he later visited Hiss in Washington, and said his reputation was "unequivocally excellent."

While Hiss' attorneys previously indicated he would take the stand in his own defense late today or Thursday, they said it now looks like he will appear either late Thursday or Friday.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

VA It stands a good chance in the Senate to get back at least half of the 29 million dollars House cut in funds to pay salaries. The House slash for the Civil Service Commission and several other independent agencies also may be halved by the Senate.

A member of the Senate Appropriations Committee forecast the 50 per cent restoration of House cuts for these and several other agencies carried in the independent offices appropriation bill. The committee is expected to report out the bill early next week.

Veterans Administration would have to fire between 8000 and 9000 additional employes under the House bill. Civil Service would have to lay off 635 workers. General Accounting Office is reported to have an excellent chance of getting a substantial portion of its House slash. It has already given tentative layoff notices to 530 of its employes.

Unsettled, apparently, is the important item from VA's medical department, which is faced with a layoff of about 7000 hospital and medical employes unless the Senate increases its House budget. Meantime, a group of scientific and professional workers in VA have asked members of Congress to exempt them from veterans' preference legislation during reductions in force.

NAVY: Meritorious civilian awards were given yesterday to these employes in its Office of Industrial Relations: Arthur S. Williamson, Verne Simkins, Edward A. Sompayroc, W. S. Andress, Edward Powell and William E. Gerow. At the same time, Charles Piozet, civilian personnel adviser, was given a letter of commendation by Navy Secretary Matthews for his 40 years of Navy service. Piozet was once secretary to Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was Assistant Navy Secretary.

AMPUTEE BILL: It has been amended by the Humphrey subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee. As now written, it would give what amounts to absolute job preference to veterans who have a compensable disability of 60 or more per cent, and to those veterans who have lost an arm, eye, or leg above the ankle and who are 40 per cent or more disabled.

PREFERENCE: The Senate has approved the bill to require veterans to get a passing mark on Civil Service tests—usually 70—before the 5 and 10 preference points can be added. The bill is supported by the Administration, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, other groups.

A second provision in the bill was knocked out. It would have limited 10 points preference to those veterans who have a compensable disability of 10 or more per cent.

Admiral Paul Nibecker, the able and popular chief of Navy's industrial relations, is being shifted to New York as commandant of the Navy's big shipyard there. His successor here will be Admiral Wesley Hague of the Boston Navy Yard . . . George A. Duthie, veteran forester and a leader in the National Federation of Federal Employes, is retiring from the Forest Service after 40 years of service . . . John A. Poulin is the new chief of Interior's oil and gas foreign branch . . . The John Deere Gold Medal has been awarded to H. H. Bennett for his outstanding work as chief of the Soil Conservation Service . . . James W. Follin, No. 1 assistant at Federal Works, has been awarded the distinguished alumni service medal of the University of Michigan Alumni Association.

AFL's East Coast Metal Trades Council yesterday ended its three-day convention here after going on record for:

(1) A 30-hour work week of 5 days of 6 hours each in Navy yards at no reduction in pay; (2) the Fogerty bill, which would require the Navy to do more of its own work instead of farming it out to private concerns; (3) a 10 per cent differential in pay for hazardous work; (4) optional retirement after 25 years of service regardless of age; (5) opposition to military people in civilian jobs; (6) greater weight being given seniority in making layoffs, and (7) overtime pay for Saturday and Sunday work. Frank G. Bryant of the Naval Gun Factory here was reelected president.

LAYOFF: Harvey J. Gunderson, a member of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., yesterday told the Senate Banking Committee that upward of 75 additional RFC employes would be laid off soon.

Flying Sight Of New York Slums Sells Congressmen

10 Ready to Back Housing Bill After Survey Financed By Unions and Veterans

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Ten "convinced" members of Congress returned last night from a flying study of New York and Philadelphia slums to find how public housing programs have started to wipe out other infested areas.

The slum tour, a bipartisan move to dramatize the country-wide need for Federal aid for low cost housing, began yesterday afternoon when the group left the House floor debate on the national housing measure without advance billing.

It was, in effect, the House counterpart of Senatorial visits to Washington's blighted areas prior to Senate passage of the housing bill last April 21.

To New York in Plane

The representatives, six Democrats and four Republicans, took off for New York in a chartered TWA plane from National Airport at 2:55 p. m.

The group, wilted from New York's 80-degree heat, returned to Washington last night, loaded with tales of bad city living, convinced to a man that the housing bill should pass.

Before takeoff, one Congressman, James G. Fulton (R., Pa.) "was on the fence."

But looking at a broken down, windowless and reeking toilet at 118 Monroe st., on Manhattan's lower East Side, converted him.

Emerging from the tenement house, Fulton said:

"This is worse than anything I ever saw in displaced persons camps of Europe. One look at what passed for a toilet for a whole floor in that building convinced me that I had to cast my vote for the housing bill."

All members agreed last night that the day's whirlwind swing through New York and Philadelphia did not show up anything "more depressing" than the alley dwellings many of them can see from their Capitol office buildings.

Representative Jacob K. Javits, (R., N. Y.), leader of yesterday's slum study, compared New York and District slums this way:

"One's just as bad as the other. In New York there are tall buildings; in the District you have low ones. They're both abominable."

Washington to Benefit

New York and Philadelphia city officials made clear that they are banking heavily on passage of the pending housing bill. In New York, the bill is estimated to help finance an additional 56,000 low-cost family units over the next 6 years; in Philadelphia, officials figure the measure will mean 18,000 units.

Washington, also, will become eligible for Federal loans and grants if the measure passes, as amended by the House Banking Committee.

On the day-long trip, accompanied all the way by police escorts, cameramen and reporters, were:

Representatives Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr (N. Y.), Sidney R. Yates (Ill.), William D. Granahan (Pa.), William J. Green (Pa.), James V. Buckley (Ill.), and William A. Barrett (Pa.), all Democrats. Also Javits (N. Y.), Clifford Case (N. J.), Fulton (Pa.), and Gardner R. Withrow (Wis.), Republicans, and Lawrence Henderson, Administrative assistant to Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) who managed the trip.

The survey was financed by contributions from the AFL, CIO, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Americans for Democratic Action.

House Group Hears Pleas For 3 Judges

Strong appeals to add three judges to the 10-member Municipal Court were presented yesterday to the House District Judiciary Subcommittee.

Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said additional witnesses, for and against the plan, will be heard next week.

The appeal for more judges ran into sharp questioning from Representatives Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) and John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif.).

O'Hara suggested that the work of one branch of the court, handling landlord-tenant cases, would be reduced sharply with the end of rent control.

Chief Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court of Appeals disagreed with O'Hara's view. He said current experience with commercial property, over which there is no rent control, indicated there would be no let-up in eviction cases when rent control over housing ends here. The present law ends June 30, 1950.

"If rent control ended tomorrow, you would have the most chaotic condition you have ever seen in the struggle for possession of property," Judge Cayton commented. "You have it today with commercial property."

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court cited a steady increase in the work load of cases in urging the three additional judges. He said two of the judges would be put to work to clear up the backlog of civil cases, now 12 to 18 months behind. He said one judge would be assigned to pretrial work.

Others who indorsed the proposed 3-judge increase for the Court included, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, speaking for the Commissioners, A. B. Cozier, speaking for the Justice Department; Jerome Barnard, president of the District Bar Association, and Lowry N. Coe, past president of the District Bar Association.

Certain Fuel Deals Freed Of Sales Tax

District Commissioners yesterday adopted regulations governing the application of the sales tax to transactions involving natural or artificial gas, oil, electricity, solid fuel or steam.

The city heads ruled that sales of such power for manufacturing, assembling, processing or refining would be exempted from the tax. Also sales to the United States and District governments were exempted.

Sales to semipublic institutions when the gas or electricity is used in their work was also exempted provided a certificate of exemption is obtained from Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent.

The city heads also adopted amendments to regulations on collection of income and franchise taxes to provide that where an individual or other entity carries on two or more different businesses, all of such returns are to be consolidated in one return. Each business may not be treated separately.

The Commissioners authorized the tax assessor to conduct hearings on all failures by corporations or unincorporated businesses to file a return within the time required and show cause why the license should not be revoked. He will then recommend final action to the Commissioners.

Providence Asks Zoning For Hospital

6-Story Structure Planned on 15-Acre Tract Near Catholic U. at $5 Million

Providence Hospital officials yesterday asked the District Board of Zoning Adjustment to authorize erection of a five-million-dollar, six-story general hospital on a 15-acre tract near Catholic University.

Spokesmen told the board at an all-day hearing in the District Building that the hospital, to be situated at 12th and Varnum sts. ne., will be used to fill the need for such facilities in the Northeast section as well as to teach nurses and internes.

Plans are for a 350 to 400-bed institution offering medical, surgery, pediatrics and psychiatric treatment. The building will follow the general design of the new George Washington University hospital, with entrance from 12th st. Large parking facilities will be provided.

The hospital was described as an educational and philanthropic organization. Dr. Philip A. Caulfield, chief surgeon, testified that training is now being given to Catholic University nursing students as well as students at the Georgetown and George Washington University medical schools. Others said that if Catholic University established a medical school the hospital would be the site of it.

Daniel W. O'Donoghue, jr., attorney for the hospital, said the institution will continue a large out-patient service at its present location at 2d and D sts. se. and will provide 12-minute ambulance service for emergency patients to the new plant.

Federal aid will be asked in the construction of the hospital, which will replace an 84-year-old structure.

Among those testifying on behalf of the application were John A. Reilly, chairman of the hospital advisory board; James E. Colliflower, board member; Sister Rosa, former superintendent, and Sister Marie, present superintendent.

Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle submitted a letter favoring the application. James H. Leahy, 4632 12th st. ne., said he and 12 other home-owners in the block adjoining the tract opposed the proposal.

In other cases, the organization of the Protestants and other Americans United for Separation of Church and State reapplied for permission to set up headquarters at 1633 Massachusetts ave. nw. A previous application on the basis that the group was an educational institution was denied by the board. The current request is as a philanthropic group. No opposition appeared.

Appeal of American University for permission to erect a five-story apartment for use by students and faculty at Massachusetts ave., Ward cle. to Wesley cle. nw. was opposed by the American University Park Citizens Association.

Payne Fights Fair Trade Liquor Bill

Alan W. Payne, chairman of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, strongly opposed yesterday a liquor fair trade bill as one that would sharply increase liquor prices in Washington.

Payne testified for the ABC Board against the bill sponsored by Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) He filed figures showing that in New Jersey, where a law like that proposed for the District is in effect, prices for a fifth of whisky are as much as $2 higher than Washington prices.

He testified before the House District Judiciary subcommittee, headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.).

Klein, attended the hearing, and commented that in New York, where a similar law has been held unconstitutional, liquor dealers are holding to the prices which they set while efforts were made to get a new law on the books.

The subcommittee also discussed briefly with Payne the bill of Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) to permit hotels and restaurants to sell liquor on credit to all their customers. Credit sale in the district now is restricted to registered hotel guests.

Baby Bird Show

1 Critically Hurt, 4 Injured in Crash Near Beallsville

One man was critically hurt and four others injured at 4:30 p. m. yesterday when their car careened off the road and into a concrete abutment on Route 28 near Beallsville, Md.

The scene of the crash is in Montgomery County about 28 miles north of the District line.

All of the injured were taken to Frederick (Md.) Memorial Hospital. Placed in an oxygen tent in critical condition was Lloyd Blank, 25, of RFD 3, Frederick.

The others have the same address, Ralph H. Blank, 27, driver of the car, was reported in satisfactory condition, and Stanley Mitchell, 29, in fair condition.

Treated and released were Ezra Shaffer, 28, and Marshall Mitchell, 24.

30-Foot Jump From Window Hurts Girl at Training School

Despondent because she had been dismissed from a job in a Baltimore Catholic girls school recently, a 16-year-old inmate of the National Training School for Girls jumped 30 feet from a window at the training school yesterday.

At Gallinger Hospital she was found to have suffered a fractured jaw and spinal injuries but her condition was reported good.

A note pinned to the pocket of her dress and addressed to Miss Audrey Minor, a social worker, said in part: "I just can't go on . . . If only I had been given a chance."

The girl, who was without known relatives, had been a ward of the District Public Welfare Department for a number of years, according to Mrs. Mary Gregory, training school superintendent.

A job at the Baltimore college had been obtained for her but, following an argument with another girl there, she was discharged after working only two weeks, a spokesman for the college said.

District School Construction Plans Revised

Education Board Urges U. S. Loan Of 40.9 Millions To Finance Program

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Board of Education yesterday revised its school building program and renewed its bid for a Federal loan to finance construction.

By unanimous vote, board members approved a statement urging the Commissioners to seek a $40,957,500 loan for construction of 40 new schools or additions to schools, the rehabilitation of 45 old elementary school buildings and the purchase of new sites.

The money would provide for building needs recommended in the survey of schools conducted by Dr. George D. Strayer.

The board's estimate does not include a new central administration building called for in the Strayer report.

Such a building, the board said, would bring the cost to $42,407,500.

Dr. Strayer's survey recommended a 38-million-dollar program also financed by a Federal loan. School officials explained their estimate was higher because it included money for sites and equipment not considered in the Strayer proposal.

Sets Up Two Priorities

The school board program set up two priorities, the first providing for 7 white schools and 18 Negro schools at a cost of $30,519,000. Receiving a secondary priority were four white schools and 11 Negro schools.

The board estimated that it would cost $1,282,500 to rehabilitate the 45 old elementary schools and set aside $3,750,000 for the purchase of sites.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning, who drew up the statement approved by the board, declared it "imperative" that a Federal loan be secured immediately so that construction can proceed.

Demand End of Segregation

Prior to adopting the report, the board received a statement signed by 10,000 Negro residents demanding that the board end segregation in the schools.

The petition, presented by Gardiner C. Bishop, president of the Consolidated Parent Group, declared that because of overcrowding in the Negro schools the board is failing to provide equal educational facilities.

Crowded conditions in Negro schools also brought forth a heated discussion between board members and school officials over proposals that the white Central and Roosevelt High Schools be transferred to use by Negro students.

Two Negro board members, Mrs. Velma G. Williams and George E. C. Hayes, called on Corning to make a report on availability of the buildings.

Mrs. Williams declared that some relief must be provided for the Negro schools by the opening of schools in September.

Supported by Sharpe

Her statement received support from Board President C. Melvin Sharpe who said he felt the board "morally and legally bound" to correct present overcrowding.

Corning, in answering Mrs. Williams, said that any reshuffling of facilities at present might endanger the school building program, particularly the proposed three new Negro high schools.

Loss of either Central or Roosevelt as white high schools also will make it impossible for the board to provide postgraduate training for white students as recommended in the Strayer report, Corning said. Such training now is provided for Negro students.

The board also appealed to the Commissioners not to turn over the Wallach Elementary School, 7th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., which has been abandoned for school purposes, to use by the Public Buildings Administration as an office building. The board has requested the building be razed to increase the play area at Hine Junior High School.

Corning said he understood the Commissioners had "practically agreed" to turn over the building to the Government agency without consulting school officials.

Success Story

Testimonial Is Given for Fred S. Kogod

Thirty-four years ago a bewildered youth of 16 arrived in Washington from Russia, unable to speak a word of English, and puzzled by a strange new world.

Kogod

One hand clutched a $1 bill, the other nervously fingered a card which was pinned to his clothes and bore the name and address of relatives in the American Capital.

Last night that boy, Fred S. Kogod, prominent citizen and wealthy businessman, was honored at a testimonial dinner tendered by civic and business and religious leaders of Washington, at the Mayflower Hotel.

The occasion was the 50th birthday of Kogod and 436 friends and associates were there at a cocktail party and dinner to celebrate with him.

Tribute was paid to Kogod as a genial citizen and personification of the American success story by Commissioner Guy Mason; Carter Barron, representing Variety Club, International; Edgar Morris, president of the Board of Public Welfare, of which Kogod is a member; Morris Cafritz, representing the Jewish community; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld; and A. Julian Brylawski, president of Theater Owners.

Kogod, who started in business here as a Southwest grocer, is head of Kogod-Burka Theater Co.; president of the Washington Refrigeration Co.; partner in Washington Wholesalers; member of the Board of Public Welfare; chairman of the Variety Club welfare committee; director of the Hebrew Home for the Aged, among other things.

Married, he has four daughters and four grandchildren. He lives at 1615 Buchanan st. nw.

He was presented with an oil portrait of himself painted by the Bulgarian artist, Tassev.

Liquor Trade Stocks Up at Present Taxes

Liquor wholesalers trying to stock up on beverages at the present tax rates were shown the way yesterday at a meeting of District officials.

The department heads agreed that Public Law 76, the revenue act, made it mandatory for tax officials to issue the present tax stamps for all stocks on hand as of July 31, the day before the higher tax rate becomes effective.

Dealers have been asking Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson to issue the present stamps so they may affix them to current stocks, but he has instituted a system of issuing them according to past usage. A court case on the policy is pending.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, Alcoholic Beverage Control Board Chairman Alan W. Payne and Pearson met yesterday to discuss the mechanics of collecting the new liquor tax.

They decided wholesalers will be permitted to file affidavits describing how much bottled goods are on hand as the tax deadline arrives and current stamps will be issued for the amount.

The officials also made plans for issuing a special sticker for sparkling wines 14 per cent and under, which are presently tax exempt, but which will be taxed after August 1. The stickers will be distributed for bottles in stock before August 1.

Pearson announced no change will be made in the liquor stamp colors because of the added expense of a changeover.

Lieut. Lineburg Dies Unexpectedly

Lieut. Horace W. Lineburg, 54, retired police specialist on subversive activities and a past District commander of the American Legion, died unexpectedly yesterday.

Lieut Lineburg

Lieutenant Lineburg's body was found on the living room floor of his home at 434 6th st. sw. He lived at the home of Mrs. Nettie Gray, a longtime family friend.

He apparently had died of a heart attack. It was because of a heart ailment that Lieutenant Lineburg, police veteran of 25 years' service, was retired from the force on November 30, 1944.

He was pronounced dead at the home by a Gallinger Hospital physician.

Lieutenant Lineburg had just returned from a two-day trip to his farm near Middletown, Va. The farm is the Lineburg family home place where he was born. Lieutenant Lineburg repurchased it about seven years ago and since his retirement had devoted much time to it. His brother, Manson L. Lineburg of Vienna, Va., had accompanied him on the trip.

Lieutenant Lineburg headed the special investigations squad during the 11 years that preceded his retirement. His squad investigated subversive activities and Lieutenant Lineburg became one of the District's top authorities in this field.

He was first appointed to the police force in 1917, but resigned after five months to enter the Navy. He served through the First World War as a coxswain aboard the battleships Minnesota and Pennsylvania.

He was reappointed a policeman in 1919 and was assigned to bicycle duty. He was hospitalized twice after crackups on his bicycle.

He was later transferred to motorcycle duty, but he had more than his share of spills on these, too, being injured in motorcycle accidents five times from 1922 to 1924.

During his police career, he received nine commendations. The first of these came in November, 1920, for a rescue in a Georgetown fire.

His big year was 1928 when he was cited for the arrest of a firebug and the capture of a gang of housebreakers, two gangs of safecrackers and a man wanted for criminal assault.

In that year, because of his "outstanding work as a policeman," he received a $5-a-month salary increase.

He was promoted to sergeant in 1928 while at the First Precinct and to lieutenant in 1931 while at the Thirteenth Precinct. At various times he was also detailed to the Seventh and Tenth Precincts.

Lieut. Lineburg was a former president of the Policemen's Association and helped establish the American Legion's Police and Fire Post. He was the post commander in 1933 and 1934.

He was the Legion's District commander in 1937 and also served a term as captain of the National Guard of Honor. He was one of the leaders in the erection of the Legion clubhouse at 2437 15th st. nw.

He was active in Masonic affairs and was a member of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon.

His death follows by only 6 months that of his son, Lieut Horace W. Lineburg, jr., a disabled veteran, at Walter Reed Hospital.

The veteran policeman had been divorced and his wife is remarried.

Survivors, in addition to Manson Lineburg, include another brother, Hesler Lineburg of New Market, Va.; four sisters, Mrs. Ethel Hamel, of 1229 Shepherd st. nw., and Mrs. Irene Supinger and Mrs. Anna McDonald, both of 1219 Shepherd st. nw., and Mrs. Mary Evans of Sherman Oaks, Calif., and one granddaughter.

Alexandria Again Seeking City Manager

Alexandria again is looking for a city manager—its fourth in two years.

Manager Robert S. Marshall, jr., assumed the job on a temporary basis last March after Nicholas A. Colasanto was dismissed.

It was understood then that a permanent manager would be selected after the city's June 14 council election.

Yesterday, Marshall said definitely he would not apply for the job on a permanent basis.

He is on leave as executive secretary of the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, and said he planned to return to that job.

At a closed, informal meeting Tuesday night, members of the council, with councilmen-elect Franklin P. Backus and Jmes M. Duncan present, appointed a three-man committee to advertise for possible applicants.

750 Civitans Open Annual Meeting Here

Formal opening of Civitan International's 29th annual convention was attended at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday by 750 members and their wives.

Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.) told yesterday's session that he saw no "basic reason" for an American inflation or depression.

"There's just one thing that could cause a depression, and that's for the people to be seized with fear and talk themselves into a depression," Hoey declared.

The Senator called the "vast sums in money" required for the Marshall Plan, "money well expended."

"If we had not established the Marshall Plan, I verily believe the earning power of this Nation would have dropped, not the six billion dollars we are expending (for ECA) but anywhere from 25 to 50 billion dollars in total sum," Hoey stated.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) delivered the address of welcome at yesterday's general session. Delegates toured the city in the afternoon.

A business session this morning, a luncheon this noon, with Alexander M. Campbell, Assistant United States Attorney General, as speaker, and election of officers this afternoon are scheduled today at the Shoreham.

Principal in Suit Collapses

An Arlington builder collapsed outside of Arlington Circuit Courtroom yesterday just as he finished testifying in a suit his firm is bringing.

After emergency treatment in the courthouse, E. L. Usilton was taken to Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment. His condition could not be learned last night. Friends said he had been under a physician's care for a heart condition.

The suit in which he testified all yesterday morning was brought by his firm, Vaughn & Usilton, Arlington builders, to get clear title to property the company wants to sell to Woodward & Lothrop. The department store plans to build a branch at the Arlington location.

Technically, the suit involves a road that isn't there. Opponents of the new store, neighborhood residents headed by Attorney William E. Day of 312 S. Ivy st., say that if the branch is built, it will Lincoln st. once existed only running across the lot.

Lincoln street once existed only on county planning maps. Last winter, however, the Arlington County Board removed the planned street from the plats to pave the way for the store.

In court Tuesday and yesterday, Day argued he and other area residents have certain "rights" in the nonexistent street and don't want it blocked.

AAUW Takes Steps to End Racial Bars

Seattle, June 22, (AP).—The American Association of University Women took steps today to prevent a branch group from ever again barring a Negro woman college graduate from membership.

An amendment to the by-laws changed the membership policy concerning branches.

The amendment, mentioned by speakers as applying directly to the Washington (D. C.) branch, was adopted by voice vote this afternoon.

The Washington branch denied membership to Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, an Oberlin College Negro graduate. The national association then moved to oust the branch from its ranks. A United States District Court decision held that the parent body could not expel its local branch.

Dr. Althea Kratz Hottel, dean of women at the University of Pennsylvania, was unopposed for re-election as association president in tonight's balloting.

Lead Is Found Toward Cure Of Eclampsia

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Bethesda, Md., pathologist, busy at cancer research, has turned up a way to produce pregnancy poisoning in animals, it was disclosed yesterday.

The importance of the almost accidental discovery, it was explained, is that it may lead to a cure for the ailment that now accounts for about one out of every five maternal deaths in the United States.

The cause, and a specific cure, for pregnancy toxemia (eclampsia) has long been sought by medical scientists. Research has been held back by lack of a means to produce it experimentally in animals for extensive study.

Means Apparently Found

Dr. Alexander Symenoidis, pathologist with the National Cancer Institute, has apparently found that means, it was announced yesterday by the U. S. Public Health Service.

Investigating the role of progesterone in breast cancer, he found that injections of the hormones into rats in late pregnancy caused death, serious illness, or abortion in circumstances strikingly similar to those in human eclampsia.

Although the finding was termed a "happy accident," it achieved an original goal of the pathologist. In 1936, it was explained, Dr. Symeonidis personally conducted a series of experiments in Germany in unsuccessful attempts to produce animal eclampsia.

Dr. Symeonidis' recent success, it was explained, does not identify the cause of pregnancy toxemia, but does demonstrate that it is apparently related to hormonal or glandular imbalance. With laboratory ability to produce the condition at will, research toward a cure is greatly expedited.

Answer Is Found

The pathologist, it was explained, was hunting for a cause of cancer. In experiments with pregnant mice he found that progesterone injections, in addition to increasing breast cancer incidence, often had a fatal effect not due to cancer. He found the answer, pregnancy poisoning induced by the injections, in a new series of experiments.

Virgin rats and rats in early pregnancy, he discovered, were not affected by the injections. Like human mothers, only rats in late pregnancy developed the disease.

So strikingly similar were the lesions in microscopic sections of both humans and rats that pathologists could scarcely tell them apart, it was reported.

Advances in medical science have more than halved maternal deaths in United States since 1937.

Mrs. Mesta's Appointment Is a Feather in Her Cap, But It Is Not All So Downy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TO THE naked eye, accepting the diplomatic post of Minister to Luxembourg might appear quite a feather in Mrs. George Mesta's cap. But though she's no end appreciative of the honor, the job entails a number of disadvantages even to a woman as naturally gregarious as Mrs. Mesta.

First, she'll have to give up Washington, where she's cut a nice niche for herself. Second, the post will cost, at a conservative estimate, three or four times her salary. Third, she'll be out of touch with all her friends in New York, Newport and all her many business interests. The new Madame Minister, however, is an exceedingly able woman and she'll give both her job and tiny Luxembourg a terrific, salutary boost. Her main interest is to establish a firmer friendship between the small duchy and our country. Some weeks ago Mrs. Mesta received photographs of the United States legation, which will be her headquarters, and has told her friends it is "perfectly beautiful." There are 12 on the legation staff, every one of whom she intends to keep. Incidentally, Mrs. Mesta took a shine to Luxembourg not only because it is the seventh most important steel producing country in the world, but because, as an avid feminist, she liked the idea of working for a country ruled by a woman. The Luxembourg court life, we've heard, is picturesquely Old World and the Grand Duchess Charlotte quite a charmer. Mrs. Mesta plans to have all her friends, as many tourists as possible, come to visit and stay to spend their dollars in Luxembourg.

THINGS are shaping up nicely for Les Biffle Day out in Piggott, Ark. The big blowout's to be July 4 when the home town citizenry's some 1500 to 2000 strong, traditionally celebrates with a monster picnic. This year Piggottians determined to honor Les for his Washington accomplishments. And about time, too, since the Secretary of the Senate, in addition to his political qualifications, deserves an additional back-pat for being the Capital's sweetest character.

Aided and abetted energetically by Arkansas' State Society, the function should be quite a "do." There'll be a special luncheon for 800 notables, local and out-of-town, among whom, it's certain, will be Vice President Barkley, Arkansas' Governor, possibly both Senators, Representative Gathings, in whose bailiwick Piggott lies. Since President Truman is spending his holiday in Independence, there's a chance he'll drop in for the fun. To tickle the crowd (between 10,000 and 15,000 are expected) there's to be a parade and fireworks. A formation flight of planes from a nearby naval station is also tentatively on the books.

Important part of the ceremonies will be the unveiling of a bust of Piggott's favorite son. It's been executed by Felix de Weldon, sculptor of the Iwo Jima statue. (Mr. de Weldon, by the way, recently finished a 45-foot copy of his original statue to be placed atop Iwo Jima.) After the dedications, Mr. B. will be presented with a scroll bearing signatures of the donors. The donors, contrary to a previously published report, do not include Senate employes. The Arkansas State Society sent out a circular letter, not soliciting funds but suggesting the idea. The response was spontaneous—and right now further plans for Biffle Day are bubbling over.

Mrs. Biffle, the calm mainstay of the Biffle energy, is taking the pleasant commotion with her usual poise. We asked what she was planning to wear on the Fourth. "Something cool," she replied!

Party Marks Dominican Army Day

By Marie McNair

ARMY DAY in the Dominican Republic was the reason for the lavish cocktail party in Washington yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Hosts were the Military Attache of the Dominican Embassy, Col. Frank A. Feliz, and Senora de Feliz, and standing with them at the doorway to the East Room were Maj. Arturo Espaillat, Assistant Military Attache, and Senora de Espaillat.

The two ladies, both young, both with the deep brown eyes and dark hair of the Latins, wore purple orchids, Senora de Feliz pinning hers at the waist of her cocoa brown lace gown and Senora de Espaillat wearing a pair fastened to the deep neckline of her white lace frock.

Army Day must also be a feast day in our little neighbor republic, for the buffet table occupying the center of the room was spread with half a hundred different dishes.

There were huge platters over alcohol burners filled with seafood Newburgh; saffron rice piled in fluffy peaks; plates of black beans; more platters of ragout; cold turkeys and hams; pineapples scooped out to be filled with fresh fruit salad.

Empanadas went the rounds as glasses were filled from the bar with champagne, half a dozen varieties of cocktails or bubbled with whisky and soda.

Ambasasdors without wives; Ambassadresses without husbands were in the group that made the circuit of the room or settled themselves at the small tables edging the walls.

I saw Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, who's waiting for her husband to return from Rome before she can make plans for a holiday for herself. The Colombian Ambassador, Gonzalo Restrepo, was there but I didn't see his Senora. With the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro were their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Castro, and Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez—she in violet with matching hat—had their daughter, Gloria with them. The Spanish Ambassador-at-large, courtly Felix Lequerica, was accompanied by Senora de Lequerica, smartly turned out in white with a tiny natural colored straw hat which dipped down over her right eye.

The Finnish Minister was there, but if Mme. Jutila was with him she wasn't easily to be found.

Saw the Spanish Charge d'Affaires, German Barabar, but not Senora de Baraibari, and Jose Colom of the Pan American Union entertaining a stag group, with de Colom—and she's too pretty to miss—was also out of the picture at the time.

Others there were Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears, handsome Julio Heurtematte in spotless white linens, and tall and distinguished Admiral Ache, naval attache of the Brazilian Embassy, in starched summer "whites."

To Celebrate Friday

Then—the Siamese Ambassador and Princess Wan Waithayakon who'll celebrate their national day on Friday; Jose Baron, who was so long Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, looking at the huge floral plaque fashioned of red, white and blue cornflowers on the buffet table, and Mrs. Lorton Sims with Col. Frederick Hooker seated on the sidelines.

Among the Guests

Walter and Bonnie Wilds were there, the latter in a pale mauve cotton with a wreath of flowers on her dark hair. And for more there were Mme. Grace Espaillat, Miss Minerva Bernardino who knew practically everyone in the room; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dudley, and coming in later Mrs. Dudley's sister, Adelina Copello, and her fiance, Maj. Jere Boggs. Col. Robert Guggenheim was waiting for his Mrs. to arrive from pouring tea at the Arts Club so he could go home for a before dinner swim.

Still others were Mme. Rybar with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Geauque, her other daughter.

Dr. Castro Decorated By Greek Ambassador

The Ambassador of El Salvador, Dr. Don Hector David Castro, was honored Tuesday at a luncheon given by the Ambassador of Greece and Mme. Dendramis. In a short ceremony after the luncheon, the Grand Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix was conferred upon Ambassador Castro by the Greek Ambassador on behalf of King Paul of Greece.

Guests at the luncheon included Senora de Castro, Senorita Maria Teresa Castro, the Counselor of El Salvador and Senora de Siri, Col. Nadel, and the Greek Counselor and Mme. Economou-Gouras.

Farewell Party

Mrs. Joseph Taylor, who will soon leave for San Francisco where she will make her home, was the honor guest at a farewell luncheon given for her yesterday at Water Gate Inn by a group of her friends. Attending the party were Mrs. Kenneth Kern, Mrs. Harold Regan, Mrs. Charles Cook, Mrs. Albert Russman, Mrs. William Taylor, Mrs. Van Kent and Mrs. Oscar Johnson.

Grimbles Lease Home

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Grimble of Hong Kong, who have recently come to Washington to make their home, have leased the home of Dr. and Mrs. James Sinclair on 34th street, the Sinclairs meantime occupying their place near Warrenton.

To Avoid Strain

A Weak Back Requires a Strong Mind

By Ida Jean Kain

ANYONE who has a weak back should be strong-minded about saving it. There's always more than one way to do everything—choose the way that avoids strain.

When you energetically attack the weeds in the garden, save your back. Bending over at the waist can cause backache, particularly if this position is held for any length of time. Use a kneeling pad and bend forward comfortably from the hips. The same precaution applies to cleaning the bath tub or any other job that involves bending over.

If the sink is too low, raise the dishpan with a rack; a too-low work table can be adjusted with blocks; the ironing board should be adjustable; a kitchen stool should have a back on it—all this spares your back.

Trying to raise a stuck window has brought on many a serious back strain, so don't heave-ho with the back muscles. Stand close to the window and let the leg muscles help the biceps—don't put the strain on your back. Never put your back into any lifting motion. Instead, kneel on one knee close to whatever you're lifting, get a firm grip on the object and come up, back straight, lifting with the powerful thigh muscles. Don't do anything in a strained, unnatural posture.

That holds true for sleeping postures, too. It's a mistake to sleep on a too-soft mattress that lets the spine sag out of line—the old feather beds must have been hard on backs. A too-rigid mattress is not the answer, for when the sleeper lies on his side, the pelvic and shoulder bones are pushed up. The mattress makers are doing a wonderful job now, making mattresses not too soft or too hard, but just firm enough. If further help is needed, place a bed board between mattress and springs to prevent any sag.

Also choose chairs with care. Very soft, over-padded, deep chairs let the spine sag out of line. Many of the old chairs supposedly built for comfort really make for strain.

And go easy on exercise. All twisting calisthenics are out of the question. In some cases, even side-bending waist slimmers must be avoided. Even sweeping the floor and raking leaves should be done with care. No movement should be sudden or jerky. Sudden movements when the body is off balance or twisted, are particularly likely to cause sacroiliac strain.

One excellent exercise is swimming. It can strengthen a weak back, for the buoyancy of the water supports the body and each set of muscles gets its share of work without strain. But no fancy diving!

Overweight is often the villain in the mystery of the aching back. Excess pounds carried on the abdomen cause an outcurve which is compensated by an incurve at the back, resulting in strain.

THOROUGHLY clean skin is the basis of all good grooming, and this is especially true in the summer when pores become clogged with dust and moisture. Proper complexion care during the season calls for frequent washings with soap and water, and a minimum of makeup. Do not use a heavy cream base, and content yourself with a light dusting of powder and a little lipstick

Soda Pop Gas Adds Zest, Cleansing Power to Facial

By Peggy Preston

THIS IS A hot weather story. It is supposed with no money-back guarantee—to make you feel better with one reading.

Picture yourself, if you have the courage, at 5 o'clock of a summer afternoon. You are at the wrong end of a long, hot, miserable day, and you look it. All trace of makeup has disappeared, wiped off by the heat, and your face feels as though it had been dipped into an oil barrel. Your hair has long since ceased to resemble anything but a piece of wet rope and your disposition is as rough as an emery board.

Within the hour you can change this sad picture, with the help of the most interesting beauty machine to reach town in many a day. This gadget, called an "Actimizer" can transform your skin, hair and disposition. It is the medium for a new type of facial, one that resembles a delicious cooling dose of "rain in the face." Carbon dioxide, which makes the sparkling bubbles in your gingerale, is the agent used to spray your skin with refreshing lotions that cleanse and rinse with soothing efficiency.

HERE, STEP BY STEP, IS WHAT HAPPENS:

1. You step into an air-conditioned cubicle at a local beauty salon, drop into a reclining chair and permit the operator to pin back your hair and place a metal receptacle in your hand. At your side is the Actimizer, consisting of a large, white enamel tank, equipped with tubes that connect a variety of bottles from which the lotions are administered.
2. You close your eyes, lean back and sigh—relaxation has already set in.
3. Then comes the first splash of cleansing oil. In a hard, tingling stream it circles the face and neck, penetrating the pores and digging out hidden particles of makeup and dry skin. You gasp, sputter and clutch the receptacle that catches the streams of moisture as they flow from your face. You are not sure you like this after all.
4. But before you can make up your mind, there is a sprinkling of clean, tepid water cascading softly on your skin, washing away dislodged dust and grime. You begin to feel friendly toward this gadget, and at peace with the world.
5. Your skin thoroughly dried, you are then treated to a one-minute massage of pressurized gas. It is poured on in a cool, steady stream that plays around the lines of the eyes, forehead and mouth. It follows the principles of a hand massage, easing and relaxing facial muscles and nerves. They could keep this up forever, as far as you are concerned, because by now the memory of a hot workaday world has completely been wiped out.
6. Final carbonated massage is combined with a finishing lotion, pale pink in color. This cooling mist, falling on your eyelids, gives the effect of rain, dropping right from the skies.

AFTERWARDS, your skin feels remarkably cleansed and refreshed; those nasty "worry" lines seem to have disappeared, at least temporarily, and your complexion appears to have recaptured some of its old glowing look. You hesitate to put on makeup, lest you spoil the effect, and finally compromise with a bit of lipstick.

All of this takes no more than 25 or 30 minutes. If, however, you have additional time to spend on yourself, you may have a shampoo and scalp massage, the carbonic gas bringing new lights and daintiness to your tresses. If you have a special skin problem, the machine will obligingly apply a mask of wax (this takes from 45 minutes to an hour), or special corrective cream lotions.

First used in Paris 12 years ago, the Actimizer is now being introduced in this country. The first one to reach Washington has been installed at the Connecticut ave. shop of Emile.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Every now and again one hears a parent say, "I love all my children just the same." Of course, what is meant is that it is believed there is no favorite and that each one gets the same amount of affection.

It's worth examining this idea. Actually, it's impossible to love any two persons in just the same way. There are differences in their ways of responding, in the things about them that appeal and that irritate. Their ages are usually different and this may very well have an effect. No, we really don't love children just the same. Nor would it be good for them if we could.

Each child likes to feel that there is some special feeling toward him—something about him which makes him loved in a unique sort of way. And if we mean that by loving our children all the same we treat them just alike, we are admitting that we don't take into account their individual differences. One child may need a great deal more reassurance than another. One can take direct commands very well. Another fights back when parents are too blunt in their suggestions. There are all sorts of differences. Favoritism should be avoided naturally but we can't and shouldn't treat our youngsters in the same way. They're too different, one from the other.

About Cost of Living in Guam

What are living conditions like in Guam? What is the climate and cost of living? Anything your readers can tell me about this will be appreciated. W. N. W.

How about it readers? Can you help W. N. W.?

Can you tell me where to obtain some white buckram to put in the band of a white summer shirt I'm making? I've tried several stores unsuccessfully.

E. W.

Among places you can usually buy buckram are stores specializing in women's millinery supplies. One local shop of this type can be reached by telephoning National 8322.

---

I noticed a question from M. J. the other day about taking a course in bookbinding. I have found from experience that a valuable course in this craft is taught here by an Englishwoman, who gives you much actual experience in the binding. She will not be starting any new classes until fall, but information about them is available by calling Adams 0387 up until about July 1. She will then be out of town for the summer. H. T.

---

What is the third ingredient for floor polish besides oil and vinegar? What kind of oil should it be? S. B. S.

There is a type of floor polish made by mixing equal parts of linseed oil, turpentine and vinegar. Perhaps this is what you have in mind.

I have been trying to track down a copy of "How to Cook!" by Marjorie Griffin, which I wrote your column about sometime ago. It seems the book is now out of print. However, I have located a bookshop where orders may be placed and an attempt made to locate a copy of the book for the customer. Several places have been "swamped" with requests for copies since my note appeared in your column. The shop that will attempt to locate copies of this book can be reached by telephoning National 9618.

---

Do you or any of your readers know where I can find some Lekvar? It is a prune butter used in many Slavonic recipes. M. L. D.

Any help, readers?

In reply to P.H.S.'s recent query about sterilizing baby bottles in a pressure cooker, I have had good success doing nipples and caps as well as bottles at 15 pounds pressure for 5 minutes, reducing pressure by cold water. Haven't broken any bottles or caps in six months; have only replaces nipples once. K. F. W.

Can lavender sachet be used as a preventive against moths? I have been using napthaline moth balls but they have such a disagreeable odor, that I would like to substitute lavender seeds as used in sachet bags. I am not sure, though, whether the lavender is used chiefly to perfume the clothes or to keep away moths. M. H.

No, lavender will not prevent moths. It merely perfumes the clothes, and the idea that odors keep away moths is a popular fallacy. You could use paradichlorobenzene. This is quite strong, too, but you might prefer the smallness of thees crystals to that of the naphthalene. Another idea is to spray the clothing thoroughly with one of the moth-preventive sprays before putting them away. There have much less odor. One now on sale is guaranteed to keep clothes moth free for five years. There are also local firms that give clothing moth-proofing treatment that does not affect color of fabric.

Mrs. Boyer's Post want ad got results!

Mrs. Florence Y. Boyer of 401 Beech Avenue, Takoma Park, says Post want ads get "wonderful results!" Mrs. Boyer is in a position to know. She just sold a 6½ cubic foot GE Refrigerator through a two-line Post "Miscellaneous for Sale" ad.
Mrs. Boyer scheduled the ad to run a week, but a Post reader bought the refrigerator the first day the ad appeared. So Mrs. Boyer called The Post, canceled her ad, and paid for only one insertion.
This was Mrs. Boyer's first experience with Post want ads. But she says it won't be her last. She's going to use The Post from now on—whenever the need arises.
Lots of people have discovered that Post "Miscellaneous for Sale" ads are an ideal way to turn surplus articles into cash. And it's so easy to put an ad in The Post. You can 'phone your ad in, charge it, schedule it to run as long as you like, and cancel it as soon as you've made a sale—paying only for the number of times the ad actually appears. And, as Mrs. Boyer says, you get "wonderful results!"
Place your ad in The Post today. Call NA. 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

$35,000 Fire Sweeps Part of Fish Market

A four-alarm fire of undetermined origin burned out a second-floor section of the Municipal Fish Market early yesterday, injuring eight firemen and causing damage estimated at $35,000.

The blaze, first reported at 3:24 a. m., swept through a series of lofts used as storage space by eight restaurants and markets in the block-long building on Maine ave. between 11th and 12th sts. sw.

Thirty pieces of equipment, including the fireboat William T. Belt, were called into action before the flames were brought under control at 4:35 a. m.

Fire officials said a brick retaining wall prevented the flames from spreading from the east wing to the central and west portions of the structure.

Space Used for Storage

The damage space was used for storage by two Flagship restaurants, the Carter-Lanhardt wholesale market, the Cy Ellis restaurant and market, the George A. Carroll market, the Cannon restaurant and two Stanford restaurants, all of which have business places on the ground floor. They used the upstairs lofts for storing a variety of equipment, including some foodstuffs, refrigerating machinery, packing materials and office records.

Despite the dense smoke and the heavy volume of water used, the downstairs business places were relatively undamaged, and all were open for business within a few hours after the fire.

Deputy Fire Marshal Roy Warfield said damage to the building, owned by the District government and leased to the operators, was estimated at from $12,000 to $15,000. An accurate appraisal of damage to stocks and equipment will not be available until completion of inventories, he added, but said $35,000 would be a "conservative" estimate of the total loss.

The deputy fire marshal said the blaze apparently originated in a utility room above one of the markets.

Hundreds Watch Blaze

Despite the early hour, the blaze attracted several hundred spectators, many clad in night clothes. When police sent for reinforcements to help restrain the crowd, Superintendent Robert Barrett came to the scene to take personal charge.

Of the eight firemen injured, only one required hospital treatment. He was Pvt. William A. Burgess, 25, Engine Company No. 2, who was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts to his right hand and smoke inhalation.

Others treated at the scene by Fire Department rescue squads were listed as Battalion Chief Alden C. Kefauver, 58, cuts to the nose; Capt. Walter A. Weber, 53, Truck No. 10, burns to the left hand; Sergt. Delmar S. Taylor, 49, Engine No. 1, cuts to the left hand and smoke inhalation; Pvt. Percy B. Anderson, 30, Engine No. 4, smoke inhalation; Pvt. Earl Bingham, 49, of the fireboat William T. Belt, cuts to the left hand; Pvt. Alfred T. Gilliom, 59, Engine No. 3, smoke inhalation, and Pvt. William H. Steuart, 35, Rescue Squad 1, cuts to the left hand and smoke inhalation.

Fire Destroys 24 Seats In 'Met' Dress Circle

New York, June 22 (U.P.).—Fire broke out tonight in the Metropolitan Opera House, but the historic building was empty and firemen doused the blaze within a short time.

Firemen said 24 seats were destroyed in the dress circle. No one was injured.

The Metropolitan Opera is closed for the season and no special event had been scheduled for tonight.

15-Foot Drop Saves Mother, Child in Fire

Trapped by flames that enveloped her Alexandria home, a young mother yesterday dropped her 7-month-old daughter from a second-floor window, then jumped out to safety herself.

Both escaped with minor injuries, and were released after treatment at Alexandria Hospital.

The fire virtually destroyed the frame house at 807 Madison st. and two others near it, 805 and 809 Madison st. Four other row houses were damaged by smoke and water.

The mother who jumped was Mrs. Elizabeth Cockerel, 27. She was treated for first-degree burns of the right arm and a cut over the right eye. Her child, Carol Ann, was treated for right arm burns.

Mrs. Cockerel said she had food cooking on the stove and was working in the back yard when she noticed flames in the house, about 4:30 p. m.

"I grabbed some clothes off the clothes line, wrapped them around my head and raced up to the second floor for the baby," she told firemen later.

Flames blocked the stairway after she picked up the child, she said. So she dropped the youngster through the window to the pavement some 15 feet below, then followed.

Fire Chief Bernard J. Padgett estimated damage to the seven homes at $15,000. Indications were, he said, that the fire was touched off by explosion of the oil stove in Mrs. Cockerel's kitchen.

Carlin

Pressmen's Local Backs Union Officials' Ouster

Plans for court action aimed at the ouster of top officials of the International Printing Pressmen's Union have been approved by the organization's Essex County, N. J., Local 31.

The membership voted full powers to a six-member committee to investigate the union's financial status, and proceed in court against their international officers. The meeting condemned as unsatisfactory a recent report by the international on charges that the late George L. Berry, while president, manipulated hundreds of thousands of dollars in union funds.

The Essex County local is understood to have been in touch with members of a similar investigating committee appointed by the Printing Pressmen's Local 1 of Washington.

No Harvard Political Test, Conant Vows

Special to The Washington Post.

Cambridge, Mass., June 22.—James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, said to a commencement eve audience today: "As long as I am president of the university, I can assure you there will be no policy of inquiry into the political views of members of the staff and no watching over their activities as private citizens.

"Any suggestion that we should employ here a procedure comparable to that required by the necessities of secret Government work and investigate the loyalty of our staff is utterly repugnant to my concept of a university."

Conant addressed prominent alumni, deans, overseers and visiting committee members meeting with the sponsors of the new Harvard Foundation for Advanced Study and Research. The foundation serves the educational interests of the graduate schools of arts and sciences, design, education, engineering and public administration.

Card-holding members of the Communist Party are "out of bounds as members of the teaching profession," Harvard's president said. Describing Communist Party members as characterized by "conspiracy and calculated deceit," he said, "I should not want to be a party to the appointment of such a person to a teaching position with tenure in any educational institution.

"But with this single exception, which is the unique product of our century, I maintain that a professor's political views, social philosophy or religion are of no concern to the university; nor are his activities within the law as a private citizen."

This, he said, is the traditional position of Harvard "and will be maintained in the face of whatever criticism may come."

Taking note that Harvard is being subject to criticism, Conant observed that this had happened repeatedly in the history of universities. "Most of it is based on a toal misundersanding on the nature of university work," he declared.

Faculty Member Oaths Opposed by Hutchins

Chicago, June 22.—Robert M. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, jained with the presidents of Harvard and Yale Universities today in opposing the requiring of loyalty oaths from faculty members.

"The assumption appears to be that American education is full of Reds, an assumption that is the precise reverse of the truth," Chancellor Hutchins told 466 graduates receiving bachelor's degrees from the college in the second session of the university's 237th convocation.

Hit-Run Warrant Is Issued for Ex-Policeman

Arlington police yesterday issued a warrant for the arrest of a former county policeman for hit-and-run damage to a car driven by Mrs. Barnard Joy, wife of the Arlington County School Board chairman.

The accident occurred about 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night at N. Jackson and Irving sts., Arlington. Mrs. Joy was uninjured.

After police received a description of the car, its license number and of the driver, Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker swore out a warrant, charging hit-and-run, against W. R. Smith, 5701 N. 11th st., Arlington.

Police records show Smith served on the Arlington force as a scout car man June 1, 1944 to May 15, 1947.

Rent Controls May Be Restored In Allegany

Cumberland, Md., June 22 (AP).—Rent control may be restored to all of Allegany County.

This possibility arose yesterday as a result of an announcement by Walter R. Heath of Baltimore, area rent director.

Heath said the action is being considered because many complaints have been received about "substantial" rent increases. At least 200 such complaints have been filed at the local office.

The local rent advisory board may consider the problem at a meeting scheduled for next month, Heath said.

Prince Georges Americanism Unit Reelects Burch

Burch is representative of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce in the association.

Others elected by the association, at a meeting Tuesday, were: Mrs. William R. Starr, of the Prince Georges Women's Club, vice president; Walter Hurley of the Lions Club, secretary-treasurer; Frank Anderson of the East Pines Citizens Association, corresponding secretary; E. D. Haloman, of the Oxon Hills Citizens Association, treasurer.

Elected to the executive board were Mrs. Bernice Cogle of the Mt. Carroll Catholic Daughters; and Alex Weinstein of the B'nai B'rith.

According to Burch the association will not engage in "witch hunting" but will attempt to teach and preach "Americanism."

1500 Doctors For Truman's Health Plan

By The Associated Press

A New York doctor who said he spoke for about 1000 physicians, indorsed President Truman's national health insurance program yesterday.

Dr. Bernhard Meyer said also "it is quite impossible" to substantiate any contention "that an overwhelming majority of American physicians is opposed to national health insurance."

His indorsement of the Administration's health bill was laid before a Senate Labor Subcommittee for the Physicians Forum. He said it is "a national organization of physicians, all of whom are members of the American Medical Association or the National Medical Association."

The American Medical Association itself is vigorously opposed to Mr. Truman's health insurance program, which would be financed mainly by a payroll tax.

In reply to a question by Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), Dr. Meyer, a psychiatrist, said the Physicians Forum has between 1500 and 1600 members, most of them in the eastern section of the country.

Soldier Is Released In Hopewell Shooting

Hopewell, Va., June 22 (AP).—Loris Emery Wyles, Camp Lee soldier who was held as a material witness in the fatal shooting of Robert W. West, has been released.

Wyles, a friend of the West family, was visiting at the West home the night Robert West was shot when he was taking a bottle of milk from the refrigerator for his infant daughter. The shot went through a window and struck West in the back.

Baltimore to Close Sydenham Hospital

Baltimore, June 22 (AP).—The city has decided to close Sydenham Hospital, its 40-year-old institution for the care of communicable disease.

Health officials explained the new antibiotics such as penicillin, the sulfa drugs, and streptomycin permit easy and speedy treatment of contagious diseases in general hospitals. Costs at Sydenham have been rising while the number of patients has declined.

What's the Verdict?

RED-HOT RIVETS

Q. Defendant was an iron contractor whose workmen were putting balconies on the third floor of a building. Plaintiff was a carpenter employed by a subcontractor. Plaintiff was doing carpenter work on the ground floor and was in constant danger because of the dropping of bolts and rivets by the ironworkers. He and his boss complained, but the iron contractor refused to us any kind of shield. The carpenter's boss insisted that the carpenter go on working, in order to finish the job on time. Finally a red-hot rivet dropped on the carpenter. He sues the iron contractor. The iron contractor denies liability, saying the carpenter knew the danger and deliberately risked it. Is the defense good?

A. The court used the iron contractor's own argument to turn the case against him. It said he knew that he was subjecting the carpenter to the risk of being hit by something dropped from the third floor, and failed to take any protective measure. The court further said that the carpenter did not deliberately risk the danger; rather, in order to keep his job, he had to subject himself to danger. He had a duty to be where he was, and therefore a right to be there. A jury could reasonably find that the iron contractor was negligent. Verdict for the carpenter.—F. L. D.

Swain 'Nurses' Grudge, Opens Fire on Navy

A bashful swain who wants his name omitted says he's got a bone to pick with the United States Navy.

It seems that Navy nurses at the Naval Medical Center must work 28 consecutive nights before they get a night off. Civilian nurses working right alongside them put in only five nights per week, and have two nights off. "And it ain't fair," yowls the complainant.

"What's it to you?" I inquired. "You're not a Navy nurse."

"Of course, not," he stormed. "But my girl is, and I gotta wait 27 days for my next date."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Cute, mischievous pup; we saved him from being run over, but our old dog objects to him." Rockville 3783 after 5 p. m.)

"Female cat, about 2 years old; she has suffered much cruelty and is therefore not affectionate, but with a little kindness would be an interesting pet." (District 1937.)

"Gray striped kitten, pretty and friendly; 2 months old." (Wisconsin 3379.)

PIED TYPE DEPT.

William R. Parris of Hillsboro, Va., and Mrs. Charles A. Howard of Hamilton, Va., wonder whether medical science has heard about our recent dispatch from London, which said in part:

"Nat Sibold, singer with the Skating Vanities show here, was notified today that his wife had given birth to a phone."

MISCELLANY

Our printers got two ads mixed up the other day. At the top, they had the line: "Here's the vacation for you—a world cruise." But below they carried a picture of a pair of men's sport shoes, and a message in behalf of their manufacturer. Marvin A. Marx of 3824 2d st. se. quipped: "Do they mean that we're to take this world cruise in this pair of steamboats pictured here?" . . . Speaking of cruises, Charlie Kohen, the stamp and coin man, leaves today on another European buying tour—this time on the trail of some rare documents. His shop will be closed until his return, September 1 . . . Helen Hill, the little girl who wanted a dog and had to be "turned down" because rules is rules, writes to thank all the nice people who offered her pets. She chose a small white fox terrier which was "just what I wanted" . . . Without mentioning The Washington Post, or the fact that The Post has been staging such an event for three years, a prominent New York columnist has suggested that it would be a nice idea for the Big Town to have an annual Celebrities Golf Tournament, to raise money to combat juvenile delinquency . . . Maybe they could also give some attention to older delinquents who occasionally swipe an idea . . . New parking space lines at the Library of Congress yield eight fewer spaces than before, because of increased width of new cars . . . Caroline Baldwin of 5501 Lincoln st., Bethesda, Md., says she's been living in this area since 1917—and for the past 32 years has been grumbling about the name "Home For Incurables." She's got a strong point there; how can any patient smile after he's told that he's going to the "Home For Incurables"? . . . Mrs. Mary M. Potter of 11200 Upton dr., Kensington, Md., says I mustn't forget to mention the old-fashioned Ice Cream Social Saturday night at the Hughes Methodist Church, in Wheaton, Md. (10710 Georgia ave., about 3 miles beyond Silver Spring) . . . Rand Smith of 1426 21st st. nw. wants to know how my old friend Sportscaster Bob Wolff recently was identified in this newspaper as "Bill (WIN7's, WTTG, DDWC, WPIK, WOSH-FM) Wolff" . . . Well, Rand, that's what you might call a slitgh typo-gretaoin error@X$!

CASUALTY?

On a recent commentary on a 500-station Mutual hookup, Newsman Joe McCaffrey quoted with proper credit my "Overheard" item that went: "If Lilienthal knew this Hickenlooper fellow was subversive, why did he hire him?" Then Joe added a thought of his own:

"Come to think of it," he said, "Mr. Hickenlooper's main claim to fame may be that he will have been the first man to be blasted out of a Senate seat by an atomic bomb."

Wonder if those other Senators (the ones who hold their deliberations at Griffith Stadium) could arrange to rub a little of that atomic dust on their bats?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

MacArthur Tilts With Bradley

By Drew Pearson

An important backstage battle has broken out between two of the Nation's highest-ranking generals—Douglas MacArthur, and Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff.

General Bradley wants to take American forces from all the Pacific except Japan and Hawaii—even out of the Philippines. In case of war, Bradley argues that American forces caught in the Pacific outside of Japan or Hawaii would be sacrificed immediately in another Bataan. Therefore, he wants all troops withdrawn to positions we can maintain.

Bradley MacArthur

General MacArthur wants American troops strung out around the Pacific to create spheres of influence to stem the spread of communism. MacArthur definitely is opposed to withdrawing American troops from the Philippines and South Korea.

The tone of his cables has become so strong that mild-mannered General Bradley has been forced to remind him that he, Bradley, not MacArthur, is Chief of Staff.

Dan Tobin's Warning

Dan Tobin, head of the powerful Teamsters Union, has sent a confidential letter to all teamsters locals, cautioning them against strikes, and urging a conciliatory policy toward employers.

Tobin, intimate friend of President Roosevelt, and a long-time power in the AFL, started his letter by saying that he was fearful of today's economic situation, and cautioned his locals against pushing good employers for wage increases.

Tobin commented at some length on the foolishness of the Ford strike at this time. He recognized that Walter Reuther, head of the United Auto Workers, was under compulsion from union membership, but said that Reuther would have been wiser to have ruled the situation with an iron hand and forbidden the strike.

Referring to his own union, Tobin was critical of the West Coast teamsters' strike, and also of the teamsters in New York City. In the latter city, bakery drivers had struck for an unwarranted increase, on the assumption that people had to eat bread, so there must be bread deliveries. But with the strike many weeks old, consumers get along by buying from chain stores and independent bakeries, Tobin said.

Communist agitation inside labor unions also came in for criticism from the forthright teamsters boss. He said he had received reports of active Communist leadership in one teamsters local—which he declined to name. An investigation was being made, Tobin said, and these agitators would be fired from the union whether they signed non-Communist affidavits or not.

Tobin also warned his teamsters that one trouble in union organizations was the inability and unwillingness of rank-and-file members to understand economic laws.

Thoughtful President

A group of 4-H Club youngsters waited on the White House portico to see the President while Representatives Robert Secrest and Earl T. Wagner were inside presenting him with a petition from the Ohio congressional delegation to name George Rogers, an SEC attorney, to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"I'm going to be photographed with those young people in the rose garden outside," said Truman.

"Don't let us detain you, Mr. President," urged Secrest.

Just then a sudden cloudburst tattooed the windows of the President's office.

"Stick around," he told his callers. "If I take those kids out in the rain to be photographed, their fathers and mothers will be after me."

Oil Opposes Roads

Congress is now probing the fact that the oil industry, which owes its prosperity to the gasoline burned on highways, is so short-sighted that it opposes new highways. Reason: to pay for the roads, many States are boosting gasoline taxes.

The extra taxes aren't paid by the oil companies, but by motorists. Yet the industry has already boosted gas prices so high they fear the public won't stand for both higher prices and higher taxes.

So, believe it or not, the oil lobby is actually fighting against building new roads.

Take North Carolina, for example: Gov. Kerry Scott, a hard-hitting liberal, submitted a 200-million-dollar road program to the voters. To finance it, he proposed a one-cent-per-gallon increase in the State gasoline tax. The oil lobby immediately and bitterly opposed, appealed to the city voters to block the program.

When the vote finally came, city people did vote 5-1 against new rural roads. But the farmers amassed 225,000 votes to the urban voters' 175,000.

Meanwhile, in the rest of the Nation, highways are in worse general condition than at any time since the depression. Yet the oil lobby continues to oppose new roads.
